Roosevelt Calls 4 Aides as G.O.P. Attacks Priming

Vandenberg Urges Coalition; Told by Hill He 'Sat Mute' in Hoover Slump; Hamilton Cites Gallup Poll.

BARKLEY, BANKHEAD, RAYBURN AND GARNER TO SEE PRESIDENT

Hope of Adjournment May 15 May Be Decided by Range of Subjects Discussed at White House Today.

Priming Attacked and Defended.

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, and National Republican Chairman John Hamilton last night attacked the President's proposed $4,500,000,000 spending-lending program to relieve the new depression. The Gallup poll was cited to show the country is not in sympathy with the idea.

Senator Hill, of Alabama, defended the program as the only way out since, he said, business refused to take up the unemployment slack.

President Roosevelt will confer with Congressional leaders at the White House today as Senate-House conferees resume consideration of the general tax revision bill. The United States Chamber of Commerce program shows taxes and Government spending will be principal topics of discussion at annual meeting here May 2-5.

Vandenberg, Hill Debate.

The $4,500,000,000 Federal spending and loan program submitted last Thursday to Congress by President Roosevelt as a plan to relieve the new depression was attacked last night by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, in radio speeches over the Mutual and Columbia Broadcasting systems, respectively.

Senator Lister D. Hill (Democrat), Alabama, who engaged in a radio debate with Senator Vandenberg, defended the President's program and declared that Federal spending was the only way out of the depression since business refused to take up the unemployment slack.

Hamilton Cites Poll.

Hill criticized Vandenberg for sitting "mute as a mummy" in the Hoover Administration, while "our whole financial and economic structure was tottering on the brink of chaos."

Hamilton, in a half-hour speech, declared that, "I can state without any sense of partisanship that the program sent to Congress by the President is not only inadequate to meet the present situation, but that it is based on the very unsound policies that actually created the depression it seeks to cure."

"The Gallup poll," continued Hamilton, "published this morning (in The Washington Post) showed that the people of this country are not sympathetic with the spending program proposed to the Congress by President Roosevelt last Thursday.

Business Attacks Blamed.

"That poll overwhelmingly indicates that what the people of this country want is to have their government remove the paralyzing fear which has strangled business, big and little alike—a paralyzing fear that has resulted directly from New Deal policies.

"I need not tell the people of this country the basic cause for the depression that has taken place during the last year. You know the answer. You have seen the capital markets frozen through fear of inflation and fear of unsound monetary policies generated by the activities of a small group of left wing New Dealers who have centered around the President.

"You have seen the wheels of business slow down and in some cases come to a stop because of the Roosevelt Calls Aides.

The tax revision bill, consideration of which will be resumed at 11 a. m. today by Senate and House conferees, will be one of the principal topics at a conference to be held at about the same time by President Roosevelt and four Congressional leaders.

The leaders are Vice President Garner, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, Speaker William B. Bankhead and House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn.

Another subject at the President's conference will be the $4,500,000,000 spending-lending program. Hearings on one phase of this plan, an appropriation of $1,250,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration, will begin Wednesday before the House Appropriations Committee. Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, will be first witness.

Other topics on the White House agenda are expected to include the wage-hour legislation, the Administration-backed "seven TVA's" regional planning bill and the $1,000,000,000 Public Works Administration "pump-priming" program. Whether Congress will try to adjourn May 15 or will work on into the summer may also be decided.

Two Taxes Up.

It was declared last night in usually well-informed Congressional sources that there was little chance for action at this session on President Roosevelt's proposal to tax income from State and local, as well as Federal securities. The President is expected to send a message to Congress this week giving his views on tax-exempt securities.

When the tax bill conferees meet the two major issues will be repeal of the undistributed profits tax and modification of the capital gains levy. The President has taken a firm stand against both in the face of Senate demands for encouragement to business.

House conferees have warned that repeal of the undistributed

Lindbergh Buys Isle Off Brittany

St. Brieuc, France, April 17 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was reported today to have purchased the little pine-clad island of Illiec off the Brittany coast.

Lindbergh made the purchase through Mrs. Alexis Carrel, wife of the American scientist. Illiec is only a short distance from St. Gilda's Island, where the Lindberghs have been visiting Mrs. Carrel since April 7.

Lindbergh was understood to have acquired the island as a residence for part of each year to facilitate his scientific research in conjunction with Dr. Carrel.

8 Injured in Blast Near U. S. Arsenal

Philadelphia, April 17 (AP).—Two workmen were burned, one critically, and six firemen were injured tonight in an explosion of three chemical tanks at the plant of the Barrett Company, located near the United States Arsenal here.

Only a few workmen were in the building at the time the explosion sent up a sheet of flame which could be seen 15 miles away.

Only Downpour Can Postpone Egg-Rolling Today, White House Says.

(Pictures, Pages 8, 9 and 13.)

Headed by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, residents of the Capital and strangers braved cool breezes and cloudy skies yesterday to throng to Easter services.

As visitors continued to flock to Washington throughout the day, augmenting the thousands of earlier arrivals, White House attaches looked forward to record-breaking crowds today at the annual Easter egg-rolling at the White House.

Despite forecast of 'probable light rains" for this morning, it was said at the White House that only a downpour would cause postponement of the ceremony until tomorrow.

Roosevelts Go to Church.

From the time the gates open at 9 a. m. until 3 p. m. "only children 10 years of age and under will be admitted to the grounds, except that small children may be accompanied by one adult guardian," the official regulations state. The grounds will be open to the general public from 3:30 to 5 for a concert by the United States Marine Corps Band.

Following sunrise services and other religious gatherings during the morning, Washingtonians and their guests turned out in somewhat subdued Easter array to pay homage to the displays of dogwood and cherry, lilac and crabapple, that distinguish streets and parks of the Capital.

Service Broadcast.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt and their daughter, Sara, 6, and Miss Elizabeth Henderson, a cousin of Mrs. Roosevelt, worshipped at St. Thomas Episcopal Church. Every seat in the church was taken and hundreds gathered outside to see the Presidential party.

After the regular service, at which the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson delivered the sermon, the President remained for communion.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore a navy blue ensemble trimmed in white and a white fox neckpiece. The President was in morning clothes.

Earlier Mrs. Roosevelt attended the eighth annual sunrise memorial service in Arlington National Cemetery, held by the Knights

Resolutions in support of the President's naval building program, urging expansion of the merit system for Government service and condemning all activities and "isms" which menace the American form of government will be presented to the forty-seventh Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, opening tonight in Constitution Hall.

Mrs. Earl Vinton Sisson, of Chicago, chairman of national defense through patriotic education, will offer the resolutions following her report which will be presented Wednesday morning.

At 2 p. m. today there will be a national defense rally in the Mayflower under Mrs. Sisson's chairmanship, attended by several thousand society members.

"Our program of national defense is one in support of American ideals and of peace," said Mrs. Sisson yesterday. "We do not want war; we want protection in the

Carnegie Nephew Lost Since Friday On Short Air Trip

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., April 17 (AP). A State-wide search was instituted today for Andrew Carnegie Whitfield, 28, of New York, a nephew of the late steel magnate Andrew Carnegie, missing since he took off from Roosevelt field last Friday on a flight to a nearby field.

Airport officials said Whitfield, flying alone, left the field at 10 a. m. Friday for Brentwood Field, Long Island, 40 miles distant, and has been unreported since.

Whitfield, a Princeton graduate and former investment broker in New York, was described by his brother as an experienced pilot, within a few hours of attaining a commercial license.

Yale Hormone Makes Tomcats Give Milk and Roosters Brood

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, April 17.—Isolation of a pure crystal, which generates mother instinct when injected into animals, and which comes from the pituitary gland, a small, hazelnut-shaped organ at the base of the brain, was announced here today by the American Chemical Society.

The crystal was found by Yale chemists and goes far toward explaining the riddle of "how we are made." It is the first time that any of the products of the pituitary gland has been extracted in pure form.

The crystal proves to be prolactin, the hormone which governs secretion of milk by mothers, both human and animal. Prolactin in impure form was discovered several years ago. It causes roosters to brood and set on eggs, tomcats to give milk and milk-deficient females to become normal.

Furthermore the new Yale crystalline form proves to be a pure protein. Protein is the main part of living tissue. It is one of the three basic food substances, the other two being fats and sugars.

The fact that this mother instinct crystal is a protein, it was

Nats Launch 1938 Season Here Today

Crowd of 32,000 to See Washington Open Against A's.

By Shirley Povich.

Along about 3 o'clock this afternoon, Frank (Speed) Roosevelt, ace right-hander of the New Deal pitching staff, will return to his annual chore of chucking a baseball.

The two-letter man of the White House A. C. who is working out his second four-year contract, will take time out from quarter-backing the New Deal forces to pitch the 1938 big league season into being.

At Griffith Stadium, after the United States Army band has tooted "Hail to the Chief" and the flag has been raised in the centerfield ceremonies, Owner Clark Griffith, of the Nats, will unwrap a shiny new baseball, hand it to the President, and at that point the photographers will take charge for five minutes.

They will ask Mr. Roosevelt to "Hold that pose, please," and they will chant the cameraman's traditional refrain of "One more! One more," although in the case of the President they are apt to add "Please" to that last command.

32,000 to See Game.

Anyway, in due time Mr. Roosevelt will chuck the baseball in the general direction of the diamond—we use general from long experience with Presidential pitches—and the 1938 major league season will begin with White House blessings.

Unless all signs have been playing us wrong, there will be 32,000 customers in the park to begin the assault on the peanuts and hot dogs when Wesley Cheek Ferrell steps out on the mound to relieve President Roosevelt of the pitching duties.

Reserve seats have been sold out for weeks in advance of this opening game between the Nats and the Athletics. The tardy have their choice of buying the 9,600 bleacher seats which go on sale this morning at 10 o'clock at 55 cents, or purchasing standing room, which will be limited to 2,500.

Fans Want to See Bonura.

It may not be typical baseball weather—forecasts are "cloudy and with light rains in the morning"—but every vantage point in Griffith Stadium will be filled, because this is the year that Washington fans are quite capitvated by their ball team.

Number One attraction—whether you do or do not include the President of the United States among the attractions—will be a large, loud, bumptious fellow named John Henry (Zeke) Bonura, who will be unveiled for the first time officially

New York, April 17 (AP).—The National Democratic Club announced today that Senator Robert F. Wagner and Postmaster General Farley would head the list of speakers at the annual Jefferson Day dinner here Saturday.

The list of speakers released by Benjamin F. Schreiber, the club president, omitted mention of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman—in disfavor with some Democratic leaders since he publicly opposed the President's Supreme Court proposal—and State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr.

The announcement said other speakers would include Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma.

Russian Tension Speeds Campaign

Rome Treaty May Free England for Pressure in Far East.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, (Monday), April 18.—Japanese forces today set the stage in southern Shantung province for what foreign military observers believed might be an offensive eclipsing anything in Spain and comparable only to the major drives of the World War.

Aroused by the recent defeat at Taierhchwang and no longer underestimating the Chinese central front resistance, Japan was believed ready now to strike in an effort to win the war in one great drive.

There were still other factors in her desire for a quick victory—increased tension between her and Soviet Russia, across the Manchukuoan-Siberian border and the possibility Britain might soon be in position to take a firmer hand in the Far East, having settled Mediterranean differences with Italy.

The new offensive, in the opinion of the foreign observers, may provide the spectacle of Nippon's best troops operating behind hundreds rather than scores of field pieces, tanks and planes.

[Chinese military authorities said they were rushing over 1,000,000 new troops into southern Shantung Province to engage a concentration of 500,000 Japanese north and south of Suchow in "history's biggest far Eastern battle," the United Press reported.—Editor's note].

Casualties in Hundreds.

While vanguards of each side clashed Sunday, heralding this major encounter along the meandering little Yi River, Chinese forces deeper inland intensified attacks on Yihsien and Tsaochwang, spearheads still imbedded in southern Shantung after the great Japanese defeat April 6 at Taierhchwang.

The Chinese hoped to unbalance the Japanese concentrations to the northeast of Yihsien and Tsaochwang.

Matching big swords against bayonets, the Chinese besiegers were reported to have cut their way into the southern suburbs of Yihsien. Casualties mounted into the hundreds for both sides.

An estimated 5,000 Japanese trapped in the walled city were said still to be holding the center of the city.

With the Chinese reporting complete encirclement of the city, the ten-day resistance of siege had become one of the notable incidents of the war.

Japanese Rush Troops.

Chinese sources reported numerous Japanese heavy artillery units pulling out of Shansi and North Honan provinces presumably bound for Shantung to aid a right-wing drive down the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and a simultaneous left-wing attack in the Lini sector.

Yihsien, on a spur of the railway, is about 40 miles northeast of Suchow, junction of the Tientsin-Pukow and Lunghai railways, the latter east-west line forming the backbone of the Chinese central front. Lini is on the Yi River, about 70 miles northeast of Suchow.

Heavy Japanese reinforcements for the Lini sector were pouring down along the Shantung coast. Be-

Rumania Jails Pro-Nazi Head To Block Coup

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, April 17.—Rumania promulgated sweeping new internal defense laws tonight as Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, powerful pro-Nazi leader, and 300 followers were arrested for plotting against the government.

The arrests were made in night police raids throughout Rumania.

Codreanu was taken into custody at his Bucharest headquarters, known as the Green House, and held there with 80 followers.

Police intimated they seized evidence that a putsch had been planned, apparently by Codreanu's illegal, extreme rightist Iron Guard.

The government quickly decreed new defense measures forbidding propaganda for a change in the form of the state, reduction in taxes or conflict between classes. The latter was believed aimed especially at Codreanu's anti-Semitic program.

The laws further forbade marching or singing of political songs, organization of private armies, or the distribution of political pamphlets.

The ministry of interior announced discovery of documents in which it was said Codreanu ordered his followers to "arm so as to be ready to march toward Bucharest

Britain, it was said, soon will summon a conference in London or Paris to present the plan and discuss cessation of trade quotas, tariffs, the problem of raw materials and stabilization of currencies under an exchange equalization fund.

Emperor Takes a Hand to Heal Political Split in Crisis.

Konoye Expected To Stay in Power

Will Learn Hirohito's Views Thursday on Total Mobilization.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, April 17.—There were indications today that the imperial palace is concerned by Japan's serious political situation.

Marquis Yasumasa Matsudaira, chief secretary to the lord keeper of the privy seal, called upon 88-year-old Prince Kimmochi Saionji, the elder statesman, and the newspaper Asahi said the marquis conveyed "the views of the senior subjects of his majesty."

Hence Saionji will know the palace attitude on the crisis, in which Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye has been reported threatening to resign, when he confers with the premier's proxy, Education Minister Koichi Kido.

Kido, one of the backers of Konoye in the premier's trouble with military and naval leaders over their demand for invocation of the drastic national mobilization law, will visit the elder statesman Thursday.

Kido Fears Reaction.

Kido, conferring with Konoye yesterday along with several other political leaders, was reported to have argued against any political change.

The newspaper Hochi said Kido warned that "a political change must be avoided now lest it have an undesirable reaction on prosecution of the war on China."

"The government must seek unification of the political and military situations by relying more on imperial headquarters," the newspaper declared. The imperial headquarters is the supreme co-ordinating organ of the army and navy.

[Associates of the premier said he had completed plans for reorganization of his cabinet and would submit them to Saionji late this week, the United Press reported.

"U. S. Ambitious."

[They believed that only minor changes would be made and that a compromise had been reached between the premier and the extreme militarists which would result in a continuation of the Konoye superparty government until after the war with China has been brought "to a victorious conclusion."

[Those closest to the premier said that any suggestion he intended to resign was "nonsense" and that the emperor was squarely behind the government's program. — Editor's note.]

Japanese naval circles and the press, meanwhile, were moved to comment on the United States naval expansion bill, now passed by the House, approved by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee and awaiting Senate action.

Generally they saw it as a "great menace to the Western Pacific."

Japan "Not Responsible."

The newspaper Kokumin said the naval authorities were taking "the gravest view" of the situation.

The press generally said approval of the Vinson bill by the Senate committee showed that Japan was not responsible for starting the naval race.

The newspaper Yomiuri said naval experts were now "convinced that the American Navy had previously planned 45,000-ton battleships but did not want to assume the responsibility in the eyes of the world."

63 Slain, 100 Hurt as British Rout Arabs in Easter Battle

By the United Press.

Jerusalem, April 17.—British military planes with bursts of machine gun fire and blasts of dynamite broke the Easter peace in the land of Christ's resurrection today with a toll of 63 dead and 100 wounded in 24 hours of terrorism.

Tonight, as pilgrims of three faiths prayed in this ancient city at the close of their holy days, an unofficial check showed 60 Arab dead, three Jewish dead and a miniature war under way between British troops and Arab terrorists around Nablus and Tulkarm.

While Christian devout knelt in prayer at the church of the Holy Sepulchre, rifle and machine-gun fire broke the stillness of the hills to the north.

Nearly 8,000 British troops and 2,000 armed police were engaged in efforts to stamp out the terrorism.

Bombing planes, co-operating with the troops, were reported tonight to be slowly driving the Arab terrorists into a trap around Nablus and Tulkarm.

Terrorist agents were said to be going from village to village, threatening residents with death unless they volunteered to take arms and

Officials Split On New Canal To Link Oceans

Army Opposes, Navy May Urge Nicaraguan as Fleet Adjunct.

By the Associated Press.

Legislators and engineers, it was learned yesterday, are debating whether the United States should add another Central American canal to its water routes or enlarge the existing Panama Canal.

The proposed new canal would link the Pacific and Atlantic through western and eastern cuts to a natural lake in Nicaragua

Army engineers have estimated the Nicaraguan Canal would cost $722,000,000. Rough estimates place the cost of constructing a new and larger set of locks in the two-way Panama Canal at about $200,000,000.

Panama Expansion Cheaper.

Although the Panama Canal expansion would be cheaper, Representative Izac (Democrat), California said yesterday any movement to adopt that course would produce protests in Congress against putting "all the eggs" of intercoastal sea communication into one basket.

Izac, author of a bill proposing that Congress instruct the President to order construction of the Nicaraguan Canal, said he intended "to keep my bill before Congress until something is done about it."

Nicaraguan Canal could be built for less than the Army estimates because of improvements in modern excavation machinery, he declared. He estimated the construction cost would not exceed $500,000,000—about the figure required for annual maintenance of the American fleet.

Navy Report Awaited.

"Suppose somehting happened to the Panama Canal?" Izac asked. "Then we would be faced with the necessity of building another fleet the size of the present one in order to protect both Eastern and Western seaboards. A Nicaraguan canal would obviate that."

Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler, retired Marine officer, recently told a Senate committee the Panama Canal could be blown up with a handful of bombs.

"I ought to know," he added, "because I helped build it."

Reports from the War and Commerce departments to the House Marine and Fisheries Committee indicate the Panama Canal now is handling only 40 per cent of its actual capacity, or a daily average of 14.8 ships. These two departments voted against the construction of the Nicaraguan Canal.

The State Department and Maritime Commission suggested the Nicaraguan canal question be investigated further. The Navy Department has not yet reported.

Mexican Congress Permits Children To Buy Oil Bonds

Mexico City, April 17 (U.P.).—The Chamber of Deputies today approved a plan to finance partial payment for the expropriated $400,000,000 oil industry, including a scheme whereby school children may participate in liquidation of the debt.

The chamber passed President Cardenas' project for a 100,000,000-peso ($24,000,000) internal loan of "national redemption" to compensate the 17 American, British and Dutch oil companies whose properties were expropriated March 18.

The deputies also approved a loan issue to be known as "scholastic bonds of national redemption" to be sold to school children. The bonds of the scholastic issue will be issued for 50 centavos (12 cents), 1 peso and 5 pesos.

Peace With Canada Credited to 'Sense'

New York, April 17. (AP).—Peace between Canada and the United States has been "preserved more by the tempering solvent of common sense than by legal precautions of an institutional nature," Dr. James T. Shotwell said today in his annual report to the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Dr. Shotwell said Europe had not been able with a "vast network of treaties" to keep the peace as well as the two American countries had done with no such monumental mechanisms.

"Canadian - American relations furnish the supreme example," he added, "of that which so bewilders the continental mind, Anglo-Saxon policy."

Says He Won't Pay $100 Fine, But Wouldn't Refuse Pardon.

The smiles were for the crowd of nearly 500 persons who pressed up to the plane in the wake of three newsreel trucks, half a dozen news cameras and a score of reporters.

The wisecracks were for everyone. He told the crowd they were "making much ado about nothing," and asked whether they had never before seen a man headed for jail.

"I deplore spending 30 days with you kind people," he said, "but I guess I'll have to take my medicine. That's what the doctors have to do occasionally."

Dr. Townsend's medicine will be 30 days in the District Jail and a fine of $100. About the latter, he announced flatly yesterday, "I'm not going to pay it—I've had my mind made up about that for a long time!" At the normal rate the $100 represents 100 days.

His sentence was prescribed in District Court in March last year for contempt of a House committee in May, 1936. He walked out on the committee, which was investigating his pension plan.

He'd Accept Pardon.

Refusal of the Supreme Court to review the case was announced April 11.

Despite efforts by members of Congress to obtain a Presidential pardon for him, Dr. Townsend said yesterday he would not appeal to the President. He added that if a pardon were granted he would not turn it down.

"That would make me look ridiculous."

He declared he was in Washington because "I can't help myself," adding that he was going to "wish every day in jail was the last one." He brought his typewriter to work on a book while in jail, "if they will let me."

He'll See Lawyer.

About how he would get into jail, Dr. Townsend was uncertain. His first interest at the airport was dinner, which he planned to have at the home of his Washington representative, Otis J. Bouma, 200 Massachusetts avenue northwest, who met him at the plane.

After that, he said, he planned to talk with his lawyer. His bond of $1,000 would be forfeited if he appears later than Tuesday.

His attorney, Joseph Cantrell, said he would go with Townsend to the District court and turn him over to the U. S. Marshal.

Slaps at McAdoo.

Questioned about the President's new recovery program, he said, "I didn't know there was a new one; thought it was just a continuation, or recession, of the old one."

He launched a brief attack at Senator William G. McAdoo (Democrat), California, one of those who have asked the President for a pardon. Declaring that "I don't like this belated interest in my affairs," adding that Senator McAdoo and Representative C. Army Hopes New Works Fund Will Cover War Building Here

Fourth of $100,000,000 Housing Program Would Be Devoted to Structure to Centralize Scattered Capital Offices.

By the Associated Press.

Army officials said yesterday they were hopeful a portion of the millions recommended by President Roosevelt for permanent public works would be devoted to the construction of a new home for the War Department and other buildings at Army posts throughout the Nation.

A national emergency such as war, they said, would find the War Department seriously handicapped if such structures were not well under way.

The Army has a building program calling for an expenditure of $100,000,000. This includes a War Department building. At present the department is housed in the State Department and 18 other buildings in Washington. Such splitting up of quarters, officials said, would cause much confusion in wartime.

Owing to its expanding work, particularly in trade agreements and munitions control, the State Department has had to ask the War Department for more room. The War Department in recent weeks gave up 40,000 square feet of space in the State Department Building, transferring various offices to the Munitions Building.

War Department plans call for construction of a department building at a cost of $27,000,000. Failing this, they provide for construction of a wing on the Munitions Building to house the general staff, at a cost of $10,500,000.

Officials said Army posts were in urgent need of new structures to replace those hastily thrown together during the World War.

There is great immediate need, they added, for $500,000 for repairs and restorations at Army posts.

By the Associated Press.

Eduardo Suarez, the Mexican finance minister, is coming to Washington to discuss renewal of the American agreement to purchase Mexican silver, high officials indicated yesterday.

Suarez arrived today in Newark, N. J., by plane from Mexico City, on what he called "a pleasure trip with my wife." He declined to discuss his itinerary.

Three weeks ago yesterday, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced the Treasury had suspended temporarily the agreement negotiated here by Suarez last Christmas, under which the United States Treasury bought 5,000,000 ounces of Mexican silver each month.

The suspension followed Mexico's expropriation of American-owned oil properties and a substantial increase in Mexican tariff dutles on products usually purchased in this country.

Arrangements have been made for Suarez to talk with State Department officials, reliable persons said yesterday, and it was assumed generally he would see Treasury officials also.

Signs of the United States relenting on the silver question developed a few days ago when Secretary Morgenthau told reporters Mexico still could sell silver to the United States Treasury by offering it on the New York Silver Market. The neighbor republic has not yet regained, however, a definite monthly commitment such as it formerly received.

Navy Bill Foes Turn Barrage On 3 Superships

Nye Seeks to Prevent the Building of 45,000-Ton Dreadnaughts.

By the Associated Press.

Opponents of the Administration's "big Navy" bill centered their efforts yesterday on an attempt to eliminate authorizatoin for three 45,000-ton superdreadnaughts.

"If we can't defeat the bill, we may at least be table to stop the building of more battleships," said Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, leader of the bloc which contends such vessels are unnecessary except for a campaign of aggression.

The Senate Naval Committee approved the $1,156,000,000 expansion bill by a unanimous vote Friday, but three Democratic members who did not vote—Bone, of Washington; Gillette, of Iowa, and Holt, of West Virginia—said they would oppose it on the floor. The measure may come up for debate Tuesday.

A prediction of early passage came from Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts. He sought to win Senate approval before the end of next week.

The purpose of the bill, Walsh declared, is to "notify the world that we intend to build the navy up to a 5-5-3 ratio." This was the old ratio sought for the relative strength of American, British and Japanese navies.

Some Senators said the committee's amendment to the House-approved bill, invoking the Walsh-Healey act in construction of all new ships, might provoke a fight on the floor.

First Communist On Harvard Staff Stirs Legion's Ire

Cambridge, Mass., April 17 (U.P.).—National Commander Daniel J. Doherty today added the voice of the American Legion to protests provoked by the first appointment of a Communist to Harvard's official family.

The naming of Granville Hicks, avowed Communist and literary editor of the radical New Masses, as a student counselor in American history was "outrageous," Doherty said at Boston.

"The placing of any such man as Hicks in charge of the teaching of American history, especially when there are ever so many really able and worthwhile true American educators available, is an outrage," he declared.

Official Harvard has maintained a discreet silence.

U. S. Recession Called Fall, Not Depression

Lewis Warned Revolt Menaces Martin's Rule Over Auto Union

Strife-Torn C. I. O. Affiliate Plans Convention to Oust Leader; Discount Report President to Join Dubinsky in Bolt to A. F. L.

By the United Press.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, has been warned that a rank-and-file revolt against Homer Martin, president of the faction-torn United Automobile Workers of America, may result in a special U. A. W. convention to oust Martin, it was learned last night.

The U. A. W.'s serious internal difficulties were laid before Lewis last week by leaders of both Martin's "progressive" faction and the "unity" group, headed by Vice Presidents Wyndham Mortimer and Ed Hall.

No one would predict whether Yewis would step into the crisis, which is reported sapping the U. A. W.'s strength. The C. I. O. chairman intervened before when he stopped Martin's attempt to oust Mortimer and Hall as vice presidents at the Milwaukee convention in 1937. He urged that all officers be re-elected. This was done, with the creation of two new vice presidencies for Martin's followers, Richard T. Frankensteen and R. J. Thomas.

The peace was of brief duration. Soon after the convention, Martin discharged some of the union's most prominent organizers who were his political opponents, "purged" the international headquarters staff, and made Frankensteen "assistant president" over the head of Mortimer. The union's constitution does not provide for an assistant president.

Coupled with the internal troubles are the persistent reports that Martin will side with David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union in the C. I. O.-A. F. L. dispute. Dubinsky has been reported ready to bolt the C. I. O. if it is established as a permanent rival of the A. F. of L.

C. I. O. leaders discount reports that Martin will try to lead the U. A. W. back into the federation.

Only 2 Contests Face D. A. R. in Quiet Election

Elections of national officers of the Daughters of American Revolution this year hold little promise for the stormy sessions which have marked many of the 46 ballotings in the past. Only two offices, those of vice president general and honorary vice president general, apparently will be contested.

Thursday night will be the time of the elections. Candidates for honorary vice president general are: Mrs. Charles B. Boothe, California; Miss Stella Pickett Hardy, Arkansas; Mrs. Ellet G. Drake, Nebraska; Mrs. Robert J. Reed, West Virginia; Mrs. William W. Reynolds, North Carolina; Mrs. William S. Shaw, Maine. Those for vice president general are: Mrs. William Henry Clapp, New York; Mrs. Charles C. D.A. R. 'Real Daughters' Now Number Only Three

The number of "real daughters" among the Daughters of the American Revolution has dwindled to three, it was learned yesterday. During the organization's annual memorial service at Continental Hall, tribute was paid to Mrs. Angelina Loring Avery, of Connecticut, daughter of a Revolutionary soldier, who died last year at 98.

Mrs. Avery's father, Solomon Loring, enlisted in the American Army at 14, according to Mrs. Julian McCurry, who delivered a eulogy of the "real daughter." When the war ended two years later, he was given an honorable discharge and a pension. Mrs. Avery was born in 1839, when her father was over 70.

The remaining three daughters of Revolutionary fighters all are over 90 and were too feeble to come to Washington.

D.A.R. Pilgrims Tendered Fete By Mrs. Becker

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and her officers will launch their national convention program today with a week of preparation behind them. Board meetings, conferences, dedication and memorial services and many social functinos have set the stage for the association's forty-seventh annual meeting.

At 1 o'clock yesterday, Mrs. Becker entertained at luncheon for the D. A. R. Pilgrims, senior high school girls from 48 States and the District who are winners of good citizenship awards. They gathered in the Presidential Dining Room of the Mayflower. Guests, in addition to the girls, were Mrs. Russell William Magna and Mrs. George Maynard Minor, honorary presidents general; Mrs. William H. Pouch, president of the Children of the American Revolution; the chairman of good citizenship, Mrs. Raymond Kimbell and her vice chairmen, Mrs. Elmer H. Whittaker, Mrs. William D. Carrithers, Miss Ada Howard Johnson, Mrs. George E. Harbert and Mrs. Thomas H. Seay. Mrs. Becker's niece and nephew, Beryl and Baker Hague, of New Jersey, also were present.

Tonight, after the opening session, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., unopposed candidate for president general, will give a reception in the Mayflower ballroom.

Western Hemisphere which will promote peace."

She pointed out that the designation of her committee expressed the purpose of the D. A. R. to aid national defense through patriotic education designed to combat whatever tends to menace the country from within or without.

The Congress will be asked to ratify the new name of the D. A. R. magazine, of which the distinguished author, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, was made editor last fall. Formerly known as "The Daughters of the American Revolution Magazine," it now is called "The National Historical Magazine —Published by The Daughters of the American Revolution." There is a division of opinion in the organization regarding the change in name, although the literary standard the periodical has attained under Mrs. Keyes' direction has brought commendation from all parts of the country.

Another issue to come before the Congress will be a proposed amendment providing that terms of all State officers be made to conform to the three-year term of the national officers. Some of the States already elect for three years with no re-election to office, but many still have two-year terms and allow more than one term for their officers. The proposed amendment has been presented to chapters throughout the various States and there is much pre-convention discussion as to the advisability of the change.

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, wearing the talisman rose satin gown in which she was presented last summer at the Court of St. James, will preside at the opening session of the Congress. Four thousand members and delegates are here for the convention which will have its brilliant ceremonies in Constitution Hall.

Tomorrow the congress will begin its routine business. Reports will be presented by officers and committee chairmen in the morning and State delegations and national committees will meet in the afternoon. Tuesday evening, the president general's reception takes place in Constitution Hall. This will be followed, at 10 o'clock, by the pages' ball given by the president general and national board of management at the Mayflower. Mrs. C. S. Schermerhorn is chairman of the committee.

An unusual feature has been arranged this year. When the president general and the members of her cabinet arrive late in the evening, the men's floor committee of 50 will form an aisle through which the president general, her personal pages and the members of her cabinet with their pages will be escorted.

Wednesday morning's session will include reports of committees and other business and Wednesday afternoon's Neil Carothers, of Lehigh University, will speak. George E. Sokolosky is scheduled to address the Congress Wednesday night on "Our National Heritage." Thursday morning, Dr. D. J. Reichard will speak on "What the Occupational Therapy Program of the D. A. R. Means to Ellis Island Marine Hospital." The afternoon will be devoted to a youth program in which Children of the American Revolution will take part, as well as the Junior American Citizens, representatives of the Approved Schools of the D. A. R.; Girl Home Makers, and junior members.

On Friday there will be pilgrimages to Arlington and Mount Vernon and Friday night a program at which Dr. Jesse R. Kellems will speak on "Conserving Our Heritage." Saturday afternoon, at 3, delegates will be received by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House and, at 7:30, in the Mayflower, will close their Congress with their annual banquet.

D. A. R. 'Junior' Groups To Hold Sale Tomorrow

Articles made by 220 different groups of D. A. R. "Juniors" throughout the country will be on sale tomorrow afternoon in connection with the annual Junior Assembly. The miniature bazaar, organized by Mrs. William H. Pouch, organizing secretary general of D. A. R. and director of Junior activities, will be in the first floor corridor of the administration building.

President General Mrs. William A. Becker inspected the "stock" yesterday and ordered several sets of hand-made napkins, contributed by the Michigan Juniors, put aside for her.

Other articles are infants' clothing, towels and aprons. Proceeds will go to the expenses of the assembly.

CopelandLauds Red Purge of Marine Union

Senator Hails Action of 'Rank and File' as Hopeful Sign.

By Edward T. Folliard

The fight by "rank and file" members of the National Maritime Union, C. I. O., to purge their organization of Communist leaders has aroused considerable interest in Congress.

"It is a hopeful sign," said Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, last night. "I wish them well."

Copeland, who heads a special Senate committee appointed to investigate "subversive" elements in the American merchant marine, has contended all along that much of the turmoil in the maritime industry was stirred up by Communists. He based his charges on information given him by seamen and by a special investigator of the New York police department.

"They've gone further than I ever did," Copeland said last night.

As was revealed in Sunday's Post, the "rank and filers" have prepared a sample ballot on which the names of 65 candidates for office in the N. M. U. are printed in red ink. They are then designated as "Communists or Communist sympathizers."

Many of the candidates are avowed members of the Communist Party, and a few—notably Ferdinand Smith and "Blackie" Meyers—are graduates of the Communist Marine Training School, or "Red Annapolis," established near Beacon, N. Y., to train seamen to spread Communist doctrine in the American Merchant Marine.

"I believe," said Senator Copeland, "that 99 per cent of our merchant sailors are good and loyal men. But a small minority of smart Communits can cause a lot of trouble in an industry like the maritime industry, especially when they are in high places."

Senator Copeland said last night that he did not know when his special committee would start its investigation of subversive activities in the merchant marine.

Mayor Gessaman said he would attempt to bring together representatives of the Southern Ohio Electric Co. and the union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, for mediation of closed shop and increased wage demands.

(Codreanu is King Carol's most bitter enemy and a violent anti-Semitist. His Iron Guard "death list" is reported to have included Mme. Magda Lupescu, red-haired friend of the king.

(The Iron Guard was declared illegal after the assassination of Premier Ion G. Duca in December, 1933, and Codreanu then organized the semi-military, pro-Nazi, intensely anti-Semitic "all for fatherland party."

(On February 21 he agreed to dissolve the organization after King Carol offered the nation a new constitution centering greater authority in the crown.)

All chief lieutenants of the tall, 38-year-old Codreanu were under arrest, including a number of clergymen. It was reported a large amount of arms and ammunition had been confiscated.

Throughout Rumania, police and the military searched houses of persons suspected of being Iron Guardists or of being in connection with the illegal organization.

The authorities asserted that in the mass of documents seized was a letter they alleged Codreanu had written to his supporters bitterly assailing the premier, Dr. Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church.

tween 3,000 and 4,000 fresh soldiers and a transport column of 300 trucks arrived at Chuhsien, 35 miles northeast of Lini, while supporting forces moved along the coast.

(Reports from Hankow said the drive to wipe out the Yihsien garrison and another 3,000 Japanese in other walled towns of southern Shantung was progressing slowly.

(Arguing against a swift coup de grace, the Chinese command said "gradual extermination" of the trapped invaders was accomplishing the same result at a smaller cost in men.

(The strategists said they welcomed Japanese attempts to relieve the beleaguered forces, inasmuch as the rescue forces were numerically weak units which could be cut off and surrounded as soon as they tried to penetrate southern Shantung.

(The command expressed confidence it would be able to handle not only relief columns, but also any new Japanese threat against Suchow—unless the enemy dispatches a large, fresh force from Japan.

(Foreign experts said they believed Japan must use a minimum of 120,000 new troops heavily backed by artillery to have any chance of establishing control of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway from Nanking to Tsinan.)

Shanghai observers were convinced that Japan has been forced to choose between a patient, diversified, long-term war and the resultant slow sapping of strength and one devastating blow to buckle the Chinese lines, destroy morale and gain possession of the Lunghai Railway to cripple Chinese communications.

The Chinese army undeniably is growing in manpower, equipment, training and morale while each week sees guerrilla fighting better organized. The Chinese civilian spirit is hardening and reports from Hankow say that Chinese are advancing in production of their own war materials.

Frankie Manthos and John Prentice, both 11, shown with Patrolman Jerome Tarleton, are members of the Washington Boys Club. Saturday while en route to the club for a play session they saw three youngsters, all under 10 years of age, amusing themselves throwing lighted matches into fuel tanks of automobiles. Rounding up the trio they marched them to the Detective Bureau, where officers congratulated them on their "arrests." Spilled gasoline on one of the tanks was ignited but quickly extinguished when one of the older boys threw sand on it. The three youngsters who were "pinched" were sent to the Receiving Home while officers sought their parents.

Franco Stalled On Seacoast, Loyalists Say

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, April 17.—Stiffened government opposition tonight was reported to have checked insurgent attempts to widen their sea front separating Catalonia from the rest of Government Spain.

Government commanders also reported their forces were heroically resisting insurgent stabs to drive a line through to the French frontier in the northeast.

The insurgents crossed the Segre River in the neighborhood of Bomalgua on the northern front, but a government communique said they were driven back with heavy losses.

The communique said an insurgent attempt to raid Barcelona by air was driven off but that insurgent warplanes bombed Cartagena, base of the government's naval fleet; San Vicente and Decalders.

An insurgent airplane was shot down at sea after bombing the coastal town of Reus.

Drive on Tortosa.

Hendaye, France, April 17 (AP).—A slashing attack from the south today brought Spanish insurgents within 10 miles of Tortosa, important highway center blocking Gen. Franco's campaign to broaden his coastal wedge in government Spain.

Insurgent commanders reported the capture of two villages from stubbornly resisting government mountain troops placed them almost within striking distance of Tortosa, a city of 20,000, at the delta head of the Ebro River.

The captured towns were Mas de Barberans and La Galera.

(Advices received at Zaragoza said the insurgents moved on after the capture of the villagers and launched a three-sided attack on Tortosa, making government positions untenable there.)

Capture of Tortosa would complete the insurgents' conquest of the Ebro Valley after having consolidated their base on the Mediterranean coast in the Vinaroz sector.

Tortosa, control point on the highway leading to Barcelona, is 95 miles southwest of that capital of loyalist Spain.

The insurgents said their main problem was cleaning out the mountain passes where strongly entrenched government artillery kept up a constant raking fire on insurgent troops.

Navy Patrols Coast.

Franco, meanwhile, rushed land, sea and air forces toward eastern Spain, determined to defend his coastal wedge against all counter-offensives.

An insurgent fleet under Admiral Juan Cervera and led by the cruiser Canarias yesterday steamed away from Palma, Franco's Balearic base, to start day and night patrol of the 25-mile strip of newly won coastal territory north and south of Vinaroz.

The naval force was ordered to use its guns to supplement land and aerial bombardment to protect fringes of the salient which the insurgents pushed to the sea two days ago.

$1,000,000 Sought To Train Servants

Training schools for colored domestic servants will receive $1,000,000 of WPA funds if Congress agrees to a demand of the United Government Employes.

Edgar G. Brown, union president, said last night he would ask the for Government aid in establishing nationally 150 household service projects similar to one operating at 400 South Capitol street.

"Demand for trained household workers is greater than the supply," Brown said. "If these schools where set up all over the country, 100,000 colored people would be taken off relief within a year."

Red Envoy Asks World to Fight Anti-Semitism

Troyanovsky Finds Fascism on the Decline; Points to Chinese War.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 17.—Alexander Troyanovsky, the Soviet Ambassador, declared today that persecution of Jews could be ended only by "the general efforts of civilized nations to defeat contemporary reaction."

He said fascism was passing the peak of its success, and added:

"The masses of the people are awakening from the nightmare of reaction was solidly entrenched, reaction was solidly intrenched. The success of China's resistance to Japanese aggression is very significant and encouraging."

Troyanovsky addressed a meeting at the Manhattan Opera House in observance of the tenth anniversary of the establishment of Birobidjan, autonomous Jewish province in eastern Siberia.

He described the anti-Semitism of some Fascist countries as an effort to return to "the Middle Age with its extreme nationalism, religious persecution and intolerance and prejudices."

Referring to alleged espionage and sabotage plots which recently were made the basis of "blood purges" in official Soviet circles, Troyanovsky charged they arose from the efforts of agents of "internatoinal reactoin" to destroy the Soviet from within.

"They got an answer which they will never forget," he said.

Paris Asks Rome to Negotiate; Ethiopia Issue Bars Pact Talk

Envoy to Parley Must Be Accredited to Empire, Italy Insists as French Seek Speedy Answer.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 17.—The French charge d'affaires in Rome was reported today to have asked Italy whether she was ready to start negotiations for a friendship pact similar to the Anglo-Italian accord signed yesterday.

Jules Blondel, acting on instructions from the French foreign office, was said to have put out feelers in hope of getting an Italian answer before Wednesday's cabinet meeting.

Informed sources said the main difficulty was Italian insistence that a French envoy to start treaty talks must have credentials to the King of Italy as Emperor of Ethiopia.

Quick Action Expected.

France has been without an Ambassador in Rome since the end of the Ethiopian war in May, 1936. By withholding an envoy, she thus refused to recognize Italy's conquest.

Once negotiations are under way French officials believed they could be rushed through in a week as result of foundations laid by Britain during talks resulting in the Anglo-Italian accord.

Nazis "Outside" Now.

London, April 17.—The possibility of a new European alignment to preserve peace was seen tonight in wake of the Anglo-Italian friendship accord.

The general hope was that a Franco-Italian accord on top of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's agreement with Premier Benito Mussolini either would bring Germany into a "new Locarno" pact or furnish a strong barrier to possible further Nazification of Europe.

(The pact of Locarno of 1925, whereby Germany, France, Belgium, Great Britain and Italy mutually guaranteed the peace of western Europe, was repudiated by Adolf Hitler March 7, 1936, when he remilitarized the Rhineland.)

There were no indications Britain and France were ready to deal with Reichstuehrer Hitler now.

Nevertheless, official circles in London pointed out that the Anglo-Italian agreement was not directed against Germany.

As a long-range policy, Chamberlain is determined to get a four-power pact, linking Britain, Germany, Italy and France.

Possibilities for the future included a suggestion the new line-up might include five powers through the addition of Poland.

Chamberlain, who promised to eat his hat if he was fooled on the talks with Italy, spent the day with the Marquis of Londonderry, stalwart friend of Germany. Lord Londonderry, a former cabinet minister, on February 27 told the House of Lords he favored a pact among France, Britain, Italy and Germany for "making peace."

British Order Armament.

London, April 17 (U.P.).—Sir Thomas Inskip, co-ordinated defense minister, has placed $250,000,000 in arms orders which will provide work for an estimated 500,000 additional men during the next three months, it was disclosed today.

Unfair Mileage Grants.

A revolt by the Senate Appropriations Committee against the so-called mileage racket encourages hope that Congress may put the allowance of traveling expenses to its members on a more satisfactory basis. The collection by some Congressmen and Senators of 20 cents per mile for trips that are not made has aroused an astonishing volume of criticism. In fairness to itself Congress ought to regularize the practice.

It is doubtless true that many Congressmen spend more on travel between their homes and Washington than the amount of their allowances. Twenty cents per mile appears to be a very generous arrangement, except for the fact that it is not granted for all trips that some national legislators are required to make. The active Senator, for example, may have to draw upon his salary for traveling expenses, while to others who spend most of their time in Washington mileage funds become a bonus.

Congress ought to be able to find some way to eliminate this discrimination. No reasonable complaint can be made against the payment of legislators' traveling expenses when they are on official business. But there is plenty of ground for criticism when members of Congress living several thousand miles away from Washington are handed sums equal to 20 cents per mile for trips they do not make. By permitting such abuses Congress subjects all of its members to criticism of a particularly devastating type.

Following the lead of its Appropriations Committee, the Senate has an excellent opportunity to modify the system of mileage allowances so that national legislators making official trips will not be penalized and others will not be handsomely paid for trips that are not taken.

Too Important To Forget.

Public interest in the TVA controversy culminating in the dismissal of Chairman Arthur E. Morgan for his "contumacy" in refusing to answer President Roosevelt's questions appears to have died down.

The spectacular nature of the events which brought demands for a Congressional inquiry into the TVA undoubtedly attracted the attention of many who have little interest in the much more important impersonal issues that precipitated the controversy. However, the chief purpose of dragging the TVA quarrel into the open is to discover the basic causes of the dissension and find out what legislative remedies are needed to assure harmonious administration of the system.

It is extremely important, therefore, that the members of the joint Congressional committee appointed to investigate the TVA shall be "kept on the job" and impressed with the importance of their assignment. According to report, difficulty has been encountered in finding Senators willing to serve on the committee. Those who know most about the affairs of TVA and are really eager to participate in the probe have unfortunately been passed over because of their actual or supposed bias. As a result, the Senate contingent still lacks one member and there is a rumor that the place may be left vacant.

This would be a very bad beginning since it would throw the balance of power into the hands of House members distracted by looming election contests. They will naturally find it difficult to give wholehearted attention to an inquiry which calls for prolonged and careful study. Consequently every effort should be made to induce a well-qualified man to complete the Senate quota. And thereafter the public ought to be reminded at frequent intervals of the existence of the committee. It is much too important to forget.

The Girls' Training School.

As was generally predicted, inquiry into the House proposal to close the National Training School for Girls has confirmed the undesirability of the move. Testimony of nearly all witnesses agreed that the alternative proposed by the House demand—to transfer the girls to Blue Plains—would be a backward step in the Capital's social welfare program.

Persons still unconvinced may find final assurance in a study of the comparative costs involved. During the past year or more, some $225,000 has been spent to renovate and enlarge the school. It is now equipped to receive upwards of 90 girls. To move them to Blue Plains would, in the estimate of Public Welfare Director Street, require the expenditure of $350,000 for additional facilities at the industrial school there. In addition, several thousand dollars would be needed to guard and maintain the Conduit road buildings. In sum, presuming that operating expenses of the two plants would be roughly equal, the transfer would mean abandoning a new $225,000 investment and adding $350,000 to the District budget.

Acting on these arguments, Senator Copeland apparently plans to recommend a deficiency appropriation to keep the training school open during the coming fiscal year at least. Judging from its past attitudes, the Senate will readily agree to this. It is in the House where persuasion will be needed. If the conclusions of the inquiry do not suffice, it might be added that the lower chamber's original objections to the training school have now vanished. The high per inmate cost to which exception was taken has been reduced by two-thirds, partly through improved administration but mostly through the return of the many girls forced out during the extensive repairs now completed.

The Essentials Of Recovery.

One of our readers, taking exception to "unjust criticism" of the President's spending program, asks what we would suggest in its place.

Even a brief answer to this very legitimate question involves a review of pressing problems that have been mismanaged by the Administration and restatement of recommendations repeatedly made in these columns for their solution. Such a recapitulation itself presents in outline a program of action that would, it is believed, provide the basis for a well-balanced recovery movement sustained by "the driving force of private capital," without the stimulus of what the Federal Reserve Board not long ago called "injurious credit expansion."

The President's program is discredited in advance of trial by the Nation's recent experiences with an artificially engendered recovery movement. Extravagant outlays in 1936 for the bonus, for farm benefits, for public works and for relief, together with the easy-money policies of the Federal Reserve System, gave a hectic temporary stimulus to business, reflected in rapidly rising prices and increasing profits. The inability of consumer purchasing power to keep pace with this price upturn as Government outlays began to taper off, and the subsequent piling up of inventories, were very instrumental in producing what is now admitted to be a serious depression.

Reckless spending policies, together with the bewilderment and uncertainty created by the Administration's experiments in "planned economy" and its assaults upon business, have been primary causes of the current reverses. It is only logical to conclude that the road to reliable recovery will not be found by repeating the cycle which has brought us to the present low point. There are other and much more effective ways of recapturing lost ground and creating enduring employment.

Last fall, when economic difficulties became obviously acute, there were widespread requests for relief from the oppressive burdens of the tax on undistributed corporate profits and on capital gains. Five months have elapsed since Congress convened in special session and the tax bill is not yet passed. It is held up in conference largely because of the President's stubborn opposition to the Senate's effort to eliminate the discredited profits tax and substantially lighten the capital gains levy. Enactment of this bill as passed by the Senate would be a greatly appreciated and effective aid to business.

Positive action on the part of the Administration to relieve the railroads is also imperative. Their financial difficulties are only in part due to the decline in the volume of general business. But their distress which stems from other causes has aggravated the existing depression. John L. Lewis, for instance, estimates that the lack of rail buying power is responsible for the present unemployment of 1,000,000 men.

Faced by increased wages and other additions to operating costs on the one hand, and by rapid shrinkage of revenues on the other, the roads are powerless to extricate themselves from an intolerable position. The I. C. C. has refused to permit them to raise their rates to levels regarded as essential by management. And efforts to induce the rail unions to take reductions in pay are now meeting with determined opposition. In spite of the seriousness of this situation, the President has failed to provide the courageous leadership needed to deal constructively with this very fundamental problem.

The "cat-and-mouse" method of handling the public utilities has been another obstacle to business improvement. If the Government would define its power policies so as to give needed assurances that there will be no unfair competition between public agencies such as the TVA and private utility companies, the latter would be encouraged to expand their operations. Large numbers of men would then be put to work by the stimulus afforded the durable goods industries.

Failure of the Administration to take a strong stand against reckless and illegal sit-down strikes likewise played a part in bringing about the current depression. Labor troubles of this kind have made businessmen properly apprehensive even when they were not directly affected by disturbances. Amendments to the Wagner labor relations act to protect employers as well as employes against unfair practices would do much to create confidence in the unquestionable theoretical desirability of collective bargaining under Government supervision.

It would be particularly helpful, moreover, if the Administration would relax the pressure it exerts so undiscriminatingly to secure higher wages and shorter hours for labor, regardless of the capacity of industry to support the resulting increases in production costs. High wages are very desirable but they must be a product of efficient operation on the part of labor and capital. When wages are pushed up and hours cut down so drastically as to curtail production, the result is apt to be economic disaster. The present troubles of France provide a very significant object lesson in this connection.

Except for the housing act, good as far as it goes, Congress has taken no constructive action to promote employment in the basic industries since the depression set in. Furthermore, no action has been taken calculated to allay the anxiety felt by both big and little businessmen as a result of the vacillating, unpredictable policies pursued by the Administration.

Uncertainties paralyzing initiative would have been much less in evidence if the Administration had grappled realistically with the problems to which reference has been made. Unfortunately, the proposed return to pump-priming brings back fears of inflation and, whatever its immediate stimulative effect, makes men even more dubious about the long-range future.

Patronage And Politics.

One strong argument against the Hatch bill to prevent Federal employes from participating in political conventions was advanced before the Senate defeated that measure. To deny members of Congress assistance from political machines composed of Federal employes would put them at a disadvantage in contests with Governors using machines of State employes. Majority Leader Barkley's race with Governor Chandler for the Democratic nomination for Senator from Kentucky gave particular emphasis to this contention.

Apparently the Senate voted to save its majority leader from unfair competition. Four years ago the Senate passed a similar bill in spite of the fact that it had been introduced by a Republican, Senator Steiwer. Of course, no majority leader was then under challenge by a Governor with a powerful machine behind him.

The worthy purpose of the bill is to prevent the "packing" of political conventions to keep an individual or an Administration in power. Too often nominations for high office have been made because a group of jobholders pledged to the incumbent exercised the balance of power. No politician should have a right thus to use public servants for his own political advantage. Nor should the will of the rank and file attending conventions be thwarted by an influx of officeholders controlled by patronage.

Certainly some action is in order to curb these abuses. But the Hatch bill does not appear to be the most desirable approach. Even if political jobholders could not serve personally, their influence would doubtless be felt in convention halls. Moreover, conventions are frequently not the most vital factor in election campaigns. The real objective should be to divorce Government employes in non-policy-making positions from active participation in all partisan politics.

What is needed is not so much the Hatch bill as extension of the merit system. If postmasters, district attorneys and other officials appointed for their political work were placed under the classified civil service they would be automatically excluded from partisan activities. Indeed, their inclination would be to avoid political controversy so as to maintain their good standing regardless of what party may be in power.

By using this approach to his objective Mr. Hatch would have an opportunity to press his point a second time—perhaps with more success.

Sartor Resartus.

Samuel Johnson, who defined patriotism as "the last refuge of a scoundrel," would certainly have had a wise-crack over the discovery that several semi-military organizations in New York maintain their headquarters in tailoring establishments. As Europe has long known, the craze for juvenile "naval reservists" and "militiamen" is one which the knights of shears and needle can afford to eye with equanimity.

It is doubtful whether the discovery will dampen the boys' enthusiasm for parading. "There's something about a soldier (or sailor) that is grand, grand, grand" regardless of who outfits him, or at what profit. But New York parents, made aware of the not wholly patriotic stimuli which set their sons to drilling, may influence transfers to some equally sartorial but more loftily inspired organizations, such as the Boy Scouts.

This plainly would please the State adjutant general, whose inquiry into quasi-military groups, particularly German-American organizations, brought to light only incidentally the tailors' subtle selling device. The adjutant seeks to suppress all military activity in the State except that of the authorized militia. The country will be no less secure if his salutary effort is 100 per cent successful.

Greatest Presidents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A select but representative group of editors, publishers, judges, lawyers, doctors, professors, businessmen and others pick as the five greatest Presidents of the United States in the order named: Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Cleveland. The vote for Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln in the order named was almost unanimous. Fifth place was hotly contested for by Cleveland and Wilson, Cleveland winning out by a narrow margin. James Madison, Andrew Johnson and Franklin D. Roosevelt came next in the vote for fifth place and two votes each; Calvin Coolidge and John Adams received one vote each.

In addition to Franklin D. Roosevelt receiving two votes, it should be noted that several commented to the effect that a greater lapse of time would be needed for a proper perspective in giving Roosevelt's place among the Presidents.

While I do not feel at liberty to disclose the names of those voting in the above selection they include publishers and editors of newspapers in Nashville, Chattanooga, Cincinnati, Memphis and Atlanta, members of our State Supreme Court, college professors and public officials, businessmen and citizens generally, and I believe their views to be fairly typical of the relative rank to be assigned our Presidents.

Generally speaking they concurred that the four greatest Presidents were Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln, and that their most striking respective characteristics could be summed up briefly: Washington was persevering, Jefferson intellectual, Lincoln patient, Jackson fearless. To which they have added: Cleveland a man of conviction, Woodrow Wilson a man of vision.

New York's Example.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington might profit by the horrible example of New York.

I don't know that my opinion gains authority from the fact that my ancestors were the original owners of some of Greater New York's most important locations, including the Brooklyn Navy Yard and Marine Hospital sites, but coming to Washington, of which the whole country is rightly so proud, my first reaction was a deep breath of relief from the oppression of masonry, cluttering every vista, shutting out every vagrant breeze, shutting in odors no human should breathe, and fretting and burdening what was once the most beautiful natural situation one could imagine.

It is well to remember that a primal requisite of man is space. Sunlight, fine trees, and beauty in nature are the things to which we turn for strength and healing. Cannot man learn to shape mentally, to cultivate beauty in himself? If this were done, fewer monstrosities of stone would be needed to express what would then be a genuine apprehension of the meaning of true greatness.

Flowers In The Mall.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Would it be possible to propose to the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission a series of gardens along the Mall that leads from the Washington Monument to the Capitol, like the Tuileries gardens in Paris and St James's Park in London?

There we could have 48 gardens with a central theme where the visitor to Washington could be introduced to each State by those natural beauties inherent in its soil. This would give employment, increase our knowledge and help the seed cataloguemen and florists that have heretofore suffered because of the depression.

Also the educational value of the gardens would be of great service. And what a recess for our statesmen where in the deepening of the spirit they would find the fundamental laws of truth and harmony.

The view would be like the mosaics in St. Paul's in Venice and might inspire a future Ruskin to write in his "lamps of Washington" our Nation's masterpiece.

MONICA MAGRAUE.

Wage And Hour Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems strange that those Government officials who are so anxious to pass a wage and hour law don't realize that they will make many enemies if they do. It is very unfair to pass such a law without including all workers, and there will be many hundreds of thousands of the underprivileged classes not in it—farm workers, those in domestic service, etc., who must work from 16 to 18 hours a day when their employers demand it.

If this bill should pass, then we can show our disapproval of such injustice by voting against those ambitious politicians in Congress at election time. It is all the more amazing that this infamous bill is actually being pushed along by a woman member of Representatives, for a woman knows only too well the long hours and in many cases low wages of those in domestic service at least. As all House members are up for election in November, we can remember this injustice and make our votes count against them then.

If it is not possible to pass legislation helping us, then none should be passed at all. In the midst of such a severe depression as we are in now, everybody should be treated alike.

Dragon Teeth Sown.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: The plea for unity and a silencing of "the voices which now seek to divide group from group" comes with poor grace from an Administration whose chief and principal spokesmen have used most of the past five years to preach hatred and mistrust and to foster division. They have spent a great deal of that precious time sowing dragon teeth and now they ask for a harvest of love and support.

We need unity and mutual confidence. They might be stimulated by an honest confession of error on the part of those who have done so much toward driving them out of the minds of our peole. They cannot be coaxed back by wheedling words coupled with a plea for funds with which to purchase another election.

Behind His Telegram.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am surprised at the statements that all citizens who sent telegrams against the reorganization bill were backed by Wall street or Liberty Leaguers.

I wish to state that my friends and I sent telegrams to the Senators and Representatives of Maryland against the bill, and we are not tied to any organization.

The reason we opposed the bill is because if the bill was passed all persons bowing down on their knees to the New Dealers would receive jobs, and those opposed would lose their jobs without regard to efficiency or saving to taxpayers.

CLARENCE H. SMALL.
Gaithersburg, Md., April 14.

Loss Of Waltman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not only is Mr. Franklyn Waltman "a loss to The Post" but he also is a great loss to me and my family.

For some years each article that he has written for The Post has been read by a member of my family at the breakfast table. Of course he hasn't known that he was having breakfast with us and that we drank a toast to him in coffee. How we shall miss him!

If he, in his new work restores the Republican Party to former successful activities how gleefully we shall greet him.

MAY LOU. H. BYINGTON.

Call For Economy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Eccles says that the payment of the bonus caused the short-lived and abortive recovery of 1936 and 1937. If this is true, and we have no reason to doubt it, then what would have been the result if Government spending, both State and national, had been held down to half, which could have been done easily and without impairing the normal functions of Government?

I will answer that question myself. There would have been such an outpouring of natural prosperity that today there would not be an unemployed person in the country except those unable, or unwilling to work.

I believe that the way to have permanent prosperity is for the Government to allow the people to keep their money in their own hands, except that which is absolutely necessary to meet the legitimate expenses of the Government.

Approves Income Tax.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to congratulate The Post on its stand in favor of a progressive income tax for the District.

As a Federal employe who will pay that or any other District tax, I feel that this form is the most desirable. A sales tax, or any form of regressive tax should not be imposed upon the voteless District residents.

I hope that you continue your stand in this matter.

OLIVIA J. ISRACH.

More Debts?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Confessing abject failure the New Deal comes back asking for more money for another big spending spree. Any high school boy knows that it will not work this time any more than it did the first time.

Will a supine Congress vote another load of debts for our children and grandchildren to pay for more experiments? Let us pray that they will again show their courage and not do so.

E. E. EATON.

Shocking Health Situation.

A baby is born to a family with an income of $500 a year or less, and on the same day another is born to a family of the $3,000 income group. The chance of death for the first infant is more than five times greater than that of the latter. The explanation? Lack of adequate medical care in the low-income group, insufficient diet, poor housing.

This is but one of the many shocking facts about this country's woeful health conditions, brought about by maldistribution of medical and general living facilities, now disclosed in an extensive survey sponsored by the United States Public Health Service. The whole trend of the figures is to show that frequency, length of serverity of illness in the group below the $1,500 income mark are far greater than in the group earning $3,000 and more.

Yet, whenever a plan is proposed for making good medical care available to all the people, a powerful group of orthodox physicians makes vehement protest. They point to the elaborate system of free clinics operating in this country, to the extensive hospital facilities available without charge, to the great amount of charity work done by doctors. The Health Service figures thoroughly refute their contention. Despite the services available, the low-income groups continue to suffer excessive illness and premature death. The present system has failed lamentably.

The present report presents the intolerable situation in a challenging manner that cannot be evaded. From the economic standpoint alone, our country would be better off if the illness and mortality rates of the underprivileged were brought down to the level of the financially more fortunate. From the moral and humanitarian aspects, such a reform would make valid the "inalienable rights" of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

The Zeuglodon.

WE saw the Zeuglodon. I wouldn't go across the street to see any of those old bones in a museum, except to show them to visiting cousins, but it's different when a monster is being dug up in what might almost have been your own back yard. The mother of Bob Spindle, who found the critter, was a Taliaferro, and my father's mother was a Taliaferro, so that makes us something like second cousins once removed to the Zeuglodon. Those things are important to us Virginians.

We didn't hear about the bones until we got down home, in the Northern Neck, though we were told the papers had been full of the subject. The Smithsonian and the Museum of Natural History both had sent men, and there had been visitors from everywhere. It appeared the specimen was unique, since nothing more than part of the jawbone of a Zeuglodon had ever been dug up before. That may be incorrect, but it's the way the neighbors gave it to us. Mr. Spindle had had ten men digging Zeugy out of the marl pit where he came to grief 3,000,000 years ago, but the fossils were so crumbly he had to take them out and trust the work to one man at a time.

* * *

We crossed the Madison Memorial Bridge, which is free this month, and took the Tidewater Trail, Virginia 17, to the southeast. The woods were sprayed with the white of dogwood and the vicious pink of redbud, the Judas tree. They looked so tranquil, so firmly rooted and so permanent it was hard to believe they had existed only an infinitesimal fraction of the time since the Zeuglodon lay down and died in Spindle's marl bank.

A little way past Vauter's church there is a sign which says "Hustle," and there is another sign which says "See the Zeuglodon." The "Hustle" is not an admonition, but a notice that the side road leads to Hustle, Va., where the Zeuglodon is being excavated. See me some time about the unusual place names in our part of Virginia. Anyway, the cows along the road to Hustle were grazing peacefully, not at all affected by the discovery that a beast with a jawbone 8 feet long had roamed those same fields.

Near Hustle we came to a field, just like any other field except for a sign saying the Zeuglodon was there. Behind a colored tenant's dwelling, with pig pens and a chicken house, the land sloped down into the woods. We followed a path that reminded me of the track to the old ice pond, and suddenly we came to a clearing in which a great pit had been dug. A tractor was dragging dirt off the edges with a scoop.

Before we went in we had to pay 25 cents—which the Hustles explain apologetically is because they have so many expenses—and pass through a turnstile. But then, after we walked across some soft ground, there was the Zeuglodon. It certainly was wonderful—so wonderful we couldn't say anything much—to think of the Zeuglodon's being covered up there so long and nobody's knowing anything about it. He had been buried even longer than anybody in the old Taliaferro graveyard.

His jawbone, just showing above the marl, looked as big as an automobile. Bob Spindle explained that the exposed part was the bottom of the lower jaw, with the roof of the mouth between. That was what the scientists said, at any rate. The local opinion was that the thing is not a head at all, but a pelvis with two huge flippers attached. Bob has put a protective wall around that part of the Zeuglodon and is going to let the museum people dig it up. He's getting out the vertebrae, though—I counted at least 25, some of them big as your head and a lot heavier.

Several ribs were lying about sealed up in plaster casts, because the little stream flooded the marl pit the other day and washed the ribs all to pieces. The bones are almost as soft as the marl when uncovered, Bob says, and harden only after exposure. Then they have to be shellacked to keep them from decomposing.

Zeugy is not the only thing that has come out of the pit. Also dug out were a tableful of big mussels, barnacles half as big as your fist, huge prehistoric oysters with grooved edges that seem to have served as teeth. One of them still had its insides intact, as juicy a morsel of stone as ever you saw. Coral, too, the marl pit yielded—in fact, everything that grows on the bottom of the sea. For, although the land there is now 150 feet above sea level, it was once below the ocean.

Young Mrs. Spindle presides over the turnstile and tells visitors about the mussel-oyster-barnacle exhibit. It's great to be told about prehistoric history by your neighbors instead of a museum guide. Teachers in Richmond must have had very much that idea, for Bob said he had had several busloads of school children from the State capital among his 3,000 or more sightseers.

The oldest thing to come out of the pit is the smallest—the ubiquitous little spiral shells that may be, I am told, as much as a hundred million years old. That makes Zeugy look like a youngster.

Fair Enough

$823 Per Day.

ASSUMING THAT Richard Whitney serves the minimum term of three years and four months in Sing Sing, and further assuming that his thefts amounted to the round, though modest, sum of $1,000,000 dollars, his per diem rate of expiation will be $823 and some cents. Thus, even in prison, Mr. Whitney will remain in the upper brackets—an aristocrat by comparison with those felons of coarser grain whose punishment was adjusted to the method rather than to the amount of their stealings.

PEGLER.

He will not be required to pay any income tax on this, but a man of his mentality might console himself through some of the lonely hours reckoning the amount that he would have to pay if the earnings were positive instead of negative. Men in prison fall into the habit of doing mental arithmetic. They think in terms of minutes, hours, months and years, not forgetting that leap year, coming once in four, gives February one day more. It helps to pass the time.

Most men whose scores run as high as Mr. Whitney's are able to use the money they stole to beat the rap, and it may be that he will have the highest return per hour of all the men in Sing Sing. Some economist of the Harold Ickes' school might reduce the matter to statistics and figure that one prisoner, Mr. Whitney, pays off his debt to society at a rate, equal to the combined daily write-off of 60 per cent of his fellow-inmates.

One editorial on the Whitney case said that it was a story without a moral, but that seems to be a hasty statement. The moral plainly is:—The Law Hates a Piker.

• • • •

THERE WAS a small item about two years ago—out of Springfield, Mo., I believe—telling of the unfortunate technicality which cropped up in the case of two hungry boys who were on the bum and broke into a carload of oranges on a siding. The value of their loot was trifling, and they would have been given nothing worse than a few days in the local jail but for the alertness of a prosecutor, who discerned a more serious offense in their simple theft of stealing some oranges, not to sell, but to eat because they were hungry. They had tampered with interstate commerce, and, although I am hazy as to the details, it is my recollection that the item said they got two years.

I have a keener memory of another case in Iowa in which a young taxi-driver, accused of robbing a passenger of a few dollars, pleaded guilty in the belief that he would be paroled from the bench. The judge had looked into his record, and because he was a first offender, had promised to do this. The boy had been promised a job and was all set to start over. But in court that day, when the young man gave his age, the judge looked startled and pained and said he had understood him to be a few months younger. He had the power to parole first offenders whose crimes were committed before a certain birthday, but, under the circumstances, considering the plea of guilty and the true age of the prisoner, he had to break the bargain and send him to prison for a term of years.

• • • •

THEY HAD a tough parole board in Iowa—composed of politicians, of course. I remember seeing one member of the board at Fort Madison Prison having his shoes shined by an old man who groveled in the dust of the hot prison yard and caressed those shoes with motherly care, hoping to touch the heart of this mighty man who had authority to give him back the few remaining years of his life. The politician didn't even look down at the old man, but went on talking to a guard, and the scene was reminded, in a bitter way, of the statue of Abraham Lincoln freeing the slaves. I have no idea that that board was sentimental about the young hackman who went to prison contrary to the court's own promise because he had mistimed his crime by a couple of months.

The financier and the murderer seem to have all the advantage in our courts. Of all the great roll of widow-and-orphan robbers of the Era of Wonderful Nonsense, only one went to prison and he a mere second varsity thief, and for a short term at that.

Mr. Whitney has been away less than a week, but has paid off several thousand dollars of his debt to society already, while other men have been able to retire only a few nickels of theirs.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Father And Son Dialogues.

Junior—Popper, I don't understand the new plan to get the country out of the depression.

Dad—Don't you read the newspapers?

Junior—Yes; that's why I don't understand it.

Dad—That starts us both off from scratch. What seems to puzzle you, my son?

Junior—The paper says that the Government is going to desterilize $1,400,000,000 in gold. What is desterilized gold?

Dad—Why, er, desterilized gold is gold that is not sterilized. You see it is like this. The Government gets into a jam and it checks up and discovers it has a lot of gold or something and it would be better for the country if it was sterilized. So it sterilizes it. Then it gets into another jam and needs the gold so it desterilizes it.

Junior—But how do they sterilize gold and what difference does it make?

Dad—Well, the papers say that for one thing sterilization and reduction of Federal Reserve requirements will expand bank resources by $2,150,000,000.

Junior—Aren't the banks sterile, popper?

Dad—I think they are being desterilized, too, but I ain't sure. Now let's see if I can make this clear. All that gold that Roosevelt sterilized has been idle and . . .

Junior—What is idle gold?

Dad—Ahem. Idle gold is gold that ain't doing anything in particular. It's loafing.

Dad—I am sure I hear the boy next door whistling for you, junior.

• • • •

Junior—The Government says it wants to spend around $5,000,000,000, which it says here in the paper is adding $2,062,000,000 for direct relief, $950,000,000 for city and State loans and $750,000,000 for supplemental five months' relief and $1,500,000,000 in RFC loans. 'Can you explain it all so I'll understand it, popper?

Dad—Positively no! And remember, I have a headache.

• • • •

Junior—What I can't get, popper, is how we can spend all this money if we are so short of money as a result of spending so much money.

Dad—You don't have to get it; you are just a schoolboy. I'm 30 years older and it's too deep for me.

Junior—Sure I do.

Junior—Daddy, when the gold is desterilized, will we . . .

Dad—No, let's not get back to that question. The Jones boy is outside. He wants you to play ball with him.

Junior—What I mean is, can the whole depression be desterilized?

Dad—I dunno, but if it can it will be.

Junior—What do they mean by inflation, and if we get inflation can it be desterilized so nobody will notice it and . . .

Junior—But, this whole economic problem . . .

Dad—You heard me! Get out there on third base! And I guess I'll go with you. I'll play the outfield!

Junior—Are you a good outfielder?

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

THE ENGLISHMAN looks on Europe these days with a tightening sense of horror. He is appalled by stories of the desperate plight of the victims of Nazism in Austria; of thousands thrown out of their jobs, deprived of their possessions, persecuted and shot for having in their day served their country well. He is moved with a hopeless pity for the Jews, confined in a country-wide prison, refused life within Germany and yet prohibited from escape, doomed victims of cruelty, who in their thousands prefer suicide to further persecution.

The Englishman sees all over Europe the decline of the conditions which for him make life and civilization possible; he sees the rapid shrinking of the area within which he may travel freely without having thrust on him evidences of intolerance and dogmatic regimentation. The Scandinavian countries, Switzerland, France and possibly an island of Czechoslovakia if he knows where it is; in these areas alone can he feel free to go happily visiting, and not all of these are secure.

Englishman Retreats In Face Of Brutalities.

YET THE Englishman's response to what he sees and reads of the decline of civilization in Europe is retreat. He will not use his power and influence to protect in other countries what he looks on as the peculiar achievements of his own British democracy.

The actions and more prominently the inactions of Britain can be traced among the principal generating causes of the present state of Europe. Inaction in Spain, half-hearted action over Abyssinia, inaction over Manchuria, and more fundamentally, lack of magnanimity in the fateful decade after the signing of the unhappy Versailles Treaty. But even if the Englishman believes that his country has helped bring Europe to its present condition, his response to the result of his inaction is still further inaction.

American opinion of his behavior puzzles the Englishman, when he reads it fairly reported. The American seem to be urging the British to go to war, because Britain is part of Europe, is responsible in part for what has happened, is endangered by the enemies in Europe. America expects every Englishman to do his duty. Yet America sees herself not as part of Europe, longs for peace and for isolation. This is precisely as the Englishman sees himself.

The English look upon themselves not as part of Europe; their policy differs from America's only by 3000 miles of water. Like the Americans, the English long for peace, hope for isolation, want no commitments and no crusading to save other peoples from the dictatorial menace. It is beside the point that England on a map looks like part of Europe; the English Channel is much wider seen from the English than from the continental side.

Complacency Found Source Of Strength.

THE IS a very large element of complacency in this English attitude which is a source of real or spurious strength to us and of irritation to the outside world and to America. Complacency plays a large part in British stability, and lack of it in American excitement.

This difference in national mentality is very well illustrated at present by economic affairs in America and in England. The British have seen America arguing hysterically over the Fascist menace of Rooseveltian proposals for a governmental reorganization which would have seemed conservative to us.

There is a growing awareness in England of the trouble that may be caused in English economic affairs by a deep and prolonged economic crisis in America. The more pessimistic see America driven through an ever-widening crisis; depression forces the government to spend largely on relief, which undermines capitalistic enterprise, which deepens the depression, calls for more relief, which still further breaks down capitalism, and so on. In the process many observers here anticipate that increasingly large ranges of economic activity will come under the control of the Federal Government; railroads, for example, may be nationalized.

But the difference in national attitude is illustrated by the response in America and in England to this prospect of progressive socialization. American critics, particularly the more conservative, shout strenuously in defense of America's vanishing democratic system of liberty. The British do not worry over the fate of democracy in such a process because they are well accustomed to it in their own country and are convinced that, since Britain is a confirmed democracy, whatever she chooses to do must in the nature of things be democratic.

Englishmen Presume Democracy's Security.

AMERICA, thinks the Englishman, has to worry about the external forms of democracy, because she has not acquired the Britain's conviction of the inherent security of democracy. The average Englishman is so complacently certain of his inalienable democracy that he takes for granted that while mere Europeans may lose their liberties he is safe as of divine right. Just as to the Englishman whatever appears in Punch is, ipso facto, funny, so whatever system of politics the English adopt is ipso facto democratic.

The average Englishman's complacent sense of democratic security is at the bottom of his unwillingness to defend democracy abroad. He does not yet feel that the growth of dictatorships in Europe offers any direct threat to his own personal liberties. He does not feel, therefore, any personal motive of self-interest which would cause him to act in defense of liberties in Europe.

Since rightly he loathes war, he wishes to avoid it until the day when there is a direct threat against the empire itself. When and if that war comes the Englishman is certain that he will win. England will only begin to worry about the safety of her democratic system when she has fought and lost a war; and then it will be too late.

Atlanta, April 17 (AP).—Twenty-eight teen-age boys, most of them fully capable of punching the eye of anybody hissing "sissy," are studying a course here in things like how to date a girl, how to set a table and how to buy a necktie.

The youths—the everyday living class of commercial high school—gave a demonstration for the Georgia Education Association this week-end.

They set tables, explained the use of silver and glassware and demonstrated the arts of dressing in good taste and poise in conversation.

Dean E. Dreyer, who organized the class in February, 1937, said the program was working wonders.

5 California Dailies Sign Guild Pacts

San Francisco, April 17 (AP).—by a vote of 243 to 22, the Northern California Newspaper Guild today accepted a 1938 contract covering wages and working conditions of five newspapers.

The contract does not provide for the "guild shop" or preferential hiring, but does guaranteed job security, preferential re-hairing, assurance against pay cuts, high dismissal pay, wage increases, reduction in working hours and overtime compensation.

It was the first contract to be agreed upon between the Guild and the five papers involved, the San Francisco Examiner and Call-Bulletin and the Oakland Post-Enquirer, of the Hearst chain; the San Francisco News, owned by Scripps-Howard, and the independently owned San Francisco Chronicle.

Relief Decreases 1 Pc. While Cases Rise 2 Pc.

Cash and produce given to the able-bodied needy by State and local relief agencies dropped 1 per cent from February to March, according to figures released yesterday by the Social Security Board. The total number of cases handled in 107 urban areas, however, increased 2 per cent to 962,430. Most increases were recorded in Eastern cities.

Lopez & Lady

By Hope Ridings Miller

They Play At Empire—And Lose.

DELVING INTO THE history of one of the smallest nations on the American continent, William E. Barrett has unearthed a fascinating but bloody story of Francisco Solano Lopez, dictator of Paraguay, and his Irish mistress, Eliza Alicia Lynch. His book represents a prodigious amount of research into a period about which too little has been written and too much has been unexplained.

Mr. Barrett has given an accurate and dramatic account of the first American nation to be governed by an absolute dictator. Lopez's story is the story of Paraguay in an era when it reached its pinnacle of ambition and then crashed to obscurity. The climax of the drama came in 1864 when Paraguay was engaged in a war against three foes, identified in the press as "The Allies." At the same time, the United States was having its internal strife and nations were being established in the far corners of the earth.

Long before that, however, Paraguay's destiny had been set. Francisco Lopez, the boy, had heard the life story of Napoleon—a story that was to bear fruit in his own life and ruin his country. Later, to identify himself with the great European warrior, and to be encouraged in this illusion by one of the cleverest women of his time.

• • • •

HECTOR VARELA, the Argentine writer, described Ella Lynch as "a beautiful sinner vitally linked to disastrous events." Judging from Mr. Barrett's biography her existence certainly pursued a tortuous path. That she was beautiful is accepted without question by the author of this book. Whether she was a sinner he leaves his readers to decide. His interpretation of her life and Francisco's is offered neither in a spirit of attack nor of defense, but simply as an interesting account of two of the most interesting figures in the history of South America.

The bare bones of the biography are neither numerous nor complicated. Francisco Lopez, the son of Charles Lopez, grew into manhood in fear of his father and pitiably conscious of the shadow of scandal under which he was born; yet he was fiercely determined to be a Napoleon of South America.

At 27, he went abroad as his father's Ambassador-at-large. From England he proceeded to France, and in the Paris of the Second Empire he met the woman who was to chart his course for the remainder of his life. Lovely, courageous and unconventional Ella Lynch apparently was one of the few realists in the Capital of Napoleon the Third. The niece of William Boyle Crook, who fought under Nelson at the Nile and at Trafalgar, she had been the wife of Xavier Quatrefages. He had given her up without a struggle when one of his superiors became infatuated with her—leaving her, according to the law in France, married while he was free. She was facing an uncertain and gloomy future when Lopez, rich, arrogant and pitiably in need of a clever woman's guidance came into her life.

• • • •

PRESENTLY, having linked her fate with a barbarian, she proceeded to civilize him. First, she effected a reform in his dress. ("It took only a woman and two tailors to make a gentleman of the Empire out of such material as Lopez.") Next, she inspired him to make Paraguay one of the most important countries of South America. Within a year after she returned with him to his homeland, Paraguay had the finest army in the new world, an army double the size of the standing army of the United States; and its commerce had increased beyond Lopez's fondest hopes.

Upon the death of his father, Francisco Lopez assumed full power, protecting his country from internal strife and external aggression by an uncompromising policy that spelled death for the individual and war for the nation if the policy was not respected. By that time, the dream of a Spanish-American empire was in his eyes—an empire that was to be as large as that of Portuguese Brazil, and as strong.

Meanwhile, Ella Lynch, a courtesan established in Asuncion, was beseiged by personal vexations. Conventional society frowned on her; respectable women would have none of her. Her fashionably furnished home and flawlessly arranged salons and dinners attracted for the most part members of the foreign colony and visitors. For an indefinite period, older settlers of Ascuncion regarded her as a malicious intruder, and a baneful influence on Lopez.

• • • •

SCORNFUL OF HER CRITICS as they were scornful of her, Mme. Lynch, the "Queen of Paraguay," continued to wield the strongest influence in Lopez's life. His mother, brothers and sisters plotted against her; his friends advised him against her; but he continued to go to her, and her only, each time he needed advice. By suggestions and implications, Ella Lynch mapped out a strategic course for Lopez, and only as he followed it did he succeed. In every instance, his failure stemmed from his digressions from the course.

In Lopez's rule there was much that was good. His first efforts were directed toward improving the lot of the lower classes from which he himself had come. He brought teachers and technical men from Europe; encouraged the development of the arts; and continued to raise Paraguay's commercial status.

But though his country expanded and prospered, Lopez was not satisfied. Recognizing the possibility of another Spanish Empire that would take its orders from Brazil, he worked out a plan to bring Brazil under his control through a conquest of conciliation. He took his first step without benefit of Ella Lynch's advice when he wrote to Dom Pedro of Brazil asking his daughter's hand in marriage. Learning of the plan, Ella Lynch stormed and ridiculed Lopez. He remained adamant in his decision; but Dom Pedro himself saved the day by ignoring the proposal.

• • • •

LATER, WHEN WAR BROKE, Mme. Lynch rallied to Lopez's support and took her stand beside him at the front, where she wore the full uniform of a colonel. When Paraguay became a blood-smeared battlefield, and Asuncion toppled into the hands of "The Allies," Ella Lynch remained with Lopez; and when the Paraguayan people became a nation of nomads in the Lopez retreat, she was still by his side.

The story of their 16 years together is much more than a dual biography or a study of a period. It is a study in international intrigue and an analysis of the effects of dictatorship on a small but important country. It is also as moving a love story as any in history.

Rights for Grandmothers

With political cheering now getting into the higher decibels, there should be room for a couple of huzzahs for the Grandmothers Club, being formed in Chicago with members in a dozen States, all of them having not only grandchildren, but active, important jobs. No rocking-chair grandma need apply.

Mrs. Marie K. Brown (three grandchildren), the president, heads the woman's department of the B. & O. Railroad; Mrs. John Wesley Gray (two), secretary, is a lecturer; one member directs a $2,000,000 estate, another manages a gravel pit; one young woman of 72 sells insurance; thus they go, and alertly, too. They will try to prove that their silvery hair indicates more astute business ability, "and lastly to show the younger generation we have their interests at heart."

Omniscient adolescents who would have grandmother stick to her knitting had best stay away from this club's door.

Crime's Sweatshop Wages

A Government bulletin says that the average robber got only $89.36 in the robbery for which he was convicted. The average burglar fared even less well—his "haul" was only $59.19. Those arrested for the crime of larceny got only $29.37.

Why do men—young men especially—risk long terms in prison for such trifling amounts? The reasons are many, but the first reason of all is that they feel they are too smart to be caught. They think, in other words, that the risk of their ever paying the penalty is too small to be worried about.

That is why sure arrest, speedy trial and inevitable conviction are so important in curbing crime. If the criminal can be shown that the chances of escape from the penalties of the law are small, the criminal is likely to cease his anti-social raids.

Blind W. Virginia Girl to Sing 'Hull's Victory' at Folk Fete

MISS EUGENIA DAVIS.

Eugenia Davis, Accompanying Herself on Auto Harp, Will Do Two Distinctly American Ballads and Two From Old World.

West Virginia will be represented at the fifth annual National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall May 6, 7 and 8, by Miss Eugenia Davis, blind musician of Charleston.

Miss Davis will sing four ballads, two of old-world origin and two are distinctly American. They will be "Hull's Victory," "Mary o' the Wild Moor," "Come Ye Fair and Tender Maidens" and "The Little Mohea."

"Hull's Victory" is indigenous to New England and sprung up there following the celebrated victory of Commodore Isaac Hull, who was in command of the Constitution during the War of 1812. Like most ballads, it has hundreds of verses, and the form found in one region often varies from that found in another. Miss Davis learned it from her grandfather, who played the fiddle for country dances.

"Mary o' the Wild Moor" originated in England and is found in numerous American States. The words to "Come All Ye Fair and Tender Maidens" are a combination of story and of philosophical discussion on love, and its disastrous consequences. "The Little Mohea," sometimes known as "The Indian Lass," is one of the better-known American ballads.

Many of her songs the blind singer learned at the School for the Blind at Romney, W. Va., where many West Virginia mountain girls attended. She later attended the New York State School for the Blind at Batavia, and the Chicago Musical College. She is a collector of ghost stories and a writer of songs and poems.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Notes

The American Federation of Government Employes goes introspective on the remoteness of a man's chances of advancement, on the basis of merit, and is a trifle saddened. After some research, the A. F. G. E. draws only two names from the bag to prove that a rise in the service is possible; but in these cases the exception rather than the rule is proved, they say. The names, incidentally, are those of E. K. Burlew, of Interior, and Smith Burdum, of the Postoffice Department.

"Opportunity for promotion should be as open as possible, in the interest of the Government and of the employe alike," says the statement. "Clearly, it is to the advantage of the Government to have employes who are striving for advancement, and to promote them whenever they have earned promotion."

Maybe, in the next go-round, another reorganization bill will seriously treat with this situation—and not deliberately avoid it.

With a springtime cover of pale honeysuckle green, the Social Security Board trips out with a new publication, the Social Security Bulletin, which in attractiveness of type and general makeup will give the other Government editors something to pattern after. Announcement says it is intended "primarily as a link between the Nation-wide organization of the board and the large group of Federal, State and local agencies concerned with administration of the program. The Bulletin is edited by Mary Ross and is prepared in the Bureau of Research and Statistics, of which Ewan Clague is director.

He has been a familiar figure at nearly all the expositions in the country, and is known to tens of thousands of stamp collectors.

There is current through April 30 an exhibition of pictorial photography by Nickolas Boris, at the National Museum . . . N.Y. Styles Wet; 1,000 in Madrid Kneel at Easter

Boston Altar Boy Burned When Candle Ignites His Vestments.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 17.—Rain drops scattered New York's million-dollar Easter "fashion parade" today, disappointing thousands looking for the spectacular.

From earliest dawn, increasing throngs from the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens, and New Jersey surged up Fifth avenue, seeking society and style. But a light sprinkle fell soon after noon, and the publicized spring fashions hastily moved indoors to escape a costly wetting.

1,000 Kneel in Madrid.

Madrid, April 17 (AP).—Easter was celebrated today in four war-scarred Protestant churches by about 1,000 persons who the pastors reported had regularly attended unmolested services since the war began 21 months ago.

Lutheran and Baptist services were held in the regular chapels, which, although marked by machine-gun bullets, were still serviceable. Episcopal and Presbyterian services were held in temporary chapels adjacent to the regular churches.

There were a few private Catholic services, none public.

Gloomy at Sing Sing.

Ossining, N. Y., April 17 (AP).—Joyous Easter brought the dreariest day yet experienced in Sing Sing Prison by Richard Whitney. Death house inmates and the group of 50 "rookie" convicts of which the bankrupt broker is a member were held in close confinement. Except for brief outdoor exercise, meals and attendance at religious services, they had to remain in their cells. Other prisoners were permitted greater freedom.

Altar Boy Burned.

Boston, April 17 (AP).—Anthony Colatrella, 10, an altar boy, screamed with pain when a candle ignited his vestments during an Easter procession at a church here today. Dr. James H. Strong, who was in the congregation, ran to the boy, wrapped him in a topcoat to smother the flames, and then took him to a hospital. His burns were not serious. Ushers aided two women who fainted, and then quieted the congregation.

California Hot.

Los Angeles, April 17 (AP).—Easter was the year's hottest day in southern California and a thermometer reading of 86 degrees sent 300,000 persons to nearby beaches.

Atlanta Dinners Ruined.

Atlanta, April 17 (AP).—A noontime fire in the kitchen of a hotel burned the dinner of hundreds of Easter guests today, causing $6,000 damage.

Church-Goers in Overalls.

Chlorine in Water Of D.C. Injurious, Physician Asserts

Chlorine in Washington water, which was blamed for the recent death of a number of fish in the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium, was declared to be seriously injurious to humans as well, by Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee, physician and vice president of the Izaac Walton League of America, in a radio address yesterday.

"We are now using an unheard of load of chlorine to purify our waters," Dr. Magee said, "and despite the fact that chlorine taken in small doses might not be noxious, the effects are cumulative and the continued taking of chlorine, especially in large quantities now found in our filtered waters, is injurious to humans and other forms of life."

He spoke on a program sponsored by the American Wildlife Institute.

Pius Canonizes 3 Saints, Then Blesses 150,000

50,000 Crowd St. Peter's for Ancient Ritual of Easter.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, April 17.—Pope Pius formally canonized three new saints today in magnificent Easter ceremonies at St. Peter's and bestowed his blessing on one of the greatest multitudes ever assembled in the plaza before the Basilica.

More than 150,000 persons waited for hours in the bright sunshine for the final event of the Easter services—the appearance of the pontiff.

Sitting upon a portable throne, with his golden tiara glistening in the sun, the Pope was but a tiny figure in a distant balcony to most of those who gathered in the vast square.

Loudspeakers Carry Blessing.

But when he intoned his Easter blessing, the Latin words were clear and strong over the loudspeakers.

Suspended from the balcony was a tapestry ornamented with the figures of the three new saints—Andrea Bobola, of Poland, in Martyr's red; Salvador da Horta, of Spain, in the brown robes of the Franciscans, and Giovanni Leonardi, of Italy, in the black of the clerics of the Mother of God.

The mass and canonizatoin ceremonies within St. Peter's, crowded with an estimated 50,000 persons, went beyond their allotted times. The aged pontiff rested longer than had been expected before appearing on the balcony.

It was 50 minutes after the scheduled time when he appeared before the multitude at 1:20 p. m.

Trumpeters announced his entrance before the congregation. Among those in the Basilica were 28 cardinals, 70 bishops and large delegations from insurgent Spain and Poland.

The pontiff raised his hand slowly to bless the faithful and then, assuming his throne near the altar, received from the cardinals a renewal of their oaths of obedience to him.

Ancient Ritual Followed.

A consistorial advocate approached the throne, accompanied by Cardinal Camillo Laurenti, head of the Congregation of Rites, and read off the names of the three to be canonized.

The advocate asked his holiness if he wished their names inscribed in the calendar of saints.

Mgr. Antonio Bacci, the Pope's secretary of briefs, replied in Latin for the pontiff, saying he wished first to implore the aid of the Virgin and all the saints and desired all present to join him in prayer.

The advocate asked the question three time more—"Insistently, more insistently and most insistently," according to the ritual—and only after the third time did he receive a response that the Pope was ready to do so.

He then read the decree of canonization. The Pope gave his assent with the single Latin word "Decernimus" ("We will it").

A te deum burst out from the Sistine choir and the 11-ton bell of St. Peter's boomed joyously. From the roof dozens of pigeons were released.

"Oremus," said the Pope, as the last strains of the hymn died away, beginning the first prayer to the new saints. The faithful sank to their knees, joining him in the supplication.

Cardinal Pignatelli di Belmonte, 87, dean of the Sacred College, then ascended to the altar to celebrate the Easter mass, replete with tinkling bells, flickering candles, incense and songs by the choir.

Physician Attends.

After the mass the Pope was carried to the great hall behind the balcony, where there was a compartment to permit him to rest before continuing the ceremony. His physician, Dr. Amintore Milani, was in attendance.

Papal gendarmes and noble guardsmen formed an honor guard immediately before St. Peter's.

Then, with a fanfare of trumpets, the Pope was borne out on the balcony in his white and gold and the crowd sent up tremendous shouts of "Long live the Pope!" before sinking to knees for the blessing.

The pontiff's words were broadcast by radio to the world.

Templar. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, witnessed by nearly 10,000 persons who overflowed the amphitheater onto the lawn, Mrs. Roosevelt placed a 5-foot cross of lilies on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Among those who took part in the services were Sir Knight Maurice L. Brewton, grand commander of the District of Columbia; Sir Knight C. Ridgway Moore, grand commander of Virginia; Sir Knight Eugene E. Thompson, past grand commander of the District of Columbia, and the Rev. Sir Knight James Shera Montgomery, grand prelate, Grand Commandery of the District of Columbia; the Rev. Sir Knight John C. Palmer, grand chaplain, Grand Lodge, F. A. A. M., of the District of Columbia, and the Rev. Brother Captain Robert D. Workman, chief of chaplains, United States Navy. The sermon was preached by the Very Rev. Sir Knight Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington Cathedral.

A broadcast service, initiating a series that followed the rising of the sun across the Continent, attracted hundreds to the Sylvan Theater on the grounds of the Washington Monument. Held under the auspices of the National Park Service, the program included choral works and solos by Handel, Haydn, Mozart, and Mendelssohn. The National Capital Parks Schola Cantorum of over 100 voices participated, and Miss Helen Wootton, 16-year-old coloratura, made her debut. The concert was directed by Arturo Papalardo.

Program Roves.

A quarter hour after the Washington service began, the broadcast moved to Hot Springs National Park, where the annual Easter sunrise pageant reenacted the final scenes in the life of Christ. Proceeding westward, the program shifted to the rim of the Grand Canyon. Finally, at 5:15 a. m. (8:15 in Washington) the broadcast terminated, earlier than it had begun, at Death Valley National Monument, California.

Commencing as early as 5 a. m., churches throughout the Capital held services to commemorate the resurrection.

Washington Cathedral attracted 5,200 worshippers in addition to an estimated 5,000 visitors during the day. The pulpit presented by Dean and Chapter of Canterbury Cathedral was used for the first time when the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington, officiated at the festival morning service. Dean Powell spoke from the pulpit in the afternoon.

The first all-youth Easter Sunday service was held in the Sylvan Theater at the base of the Washington Monument at 4 p. m. under auspices of the National Capital Area Council Scouters Association, B. S. A. Among those who took part in the ceremonies were Dr. W. Kenneth Lyons and Dr. A. P. Wilson, of the Federation of Churches; Dr. A. J. Burggraff, of Catholic University, and Rabbi Solomon H. Metz.

A get-together luncheon for strangers was held at the Shoreham Hotel under the direction of Dr. Grace A. Thompson. At St. Andrew's Church, New Hampshire avenue and V street northwest, eggs were dyed, hidden and hunted at a children's party presided over by Anne Clark, Julian Rocha and Newton Willoughby.

Although the majority of the holiday visitors had already arrived in Washington, sightseers poured into the Capital all day. About 5,000 came by train, although the unspringlike weather helped cut the normal figure for Easter Sunday at Union Station by 50 per cent. An estimated 3,000 bus passengers arrived at the Greyhound terminal, and some extra planes were employed at Washington Airport. The American Automobile Association noted the day as "quiet," but at many hotels guests were turned away.

Zoo officials estimated the throng there at 35,000.

White House to Open.

Interest of most of Washington's visitors will center today at the White House, where the grounds will be thrown open to hordes of youthful egg-rollers. Easter Monday is the only day in the year when the public is admitted to the South Grounds.

During the egg-rolling period various bands will play, including the National Training School for Boys Metropolitan Police Boys Band Metropolitan Police Boys' Club Band and Alexandria (Va.) George Washington High School Band.

Troops of Boy and Girl Scouts and Girl Reserves will be on hand to look out for the youngsters. An interne from Emergency Hospital and two nurses, and an ambulance and two nurses from the Red Cross will be in attendance. Children who lose their escorts will be taken to the east rose gardens for care and discovery.

Mrs. Roosevelt is expected to follow her usual custom of making several tours of the huge party during the festivities. The President is also expected to greet the crowd from the south portico.

Both President and Mrs. Roosevelt have other engagements, too. He will toss out the first ball at the opening game of the American League at Griffith Stadium, when the Nats will play the Philadelphia Athletics. Mrs. Roosevelt has a press conference on her schedule, as well as a luncheon for the Fortnightly Club of New York.

At 4 this afternoon, Sara Roosevelt and her 2-year-old sister, Kate, will have an Easter party at the White House for a group of young friends. Entertainment will include a marionette show, a magician, Easter egg hunt in the White House parlors and supper in the State dining room. President and Mrs. Roosevelt will help their grandchildren receive.

At the Zoological Park, egg rolling will also hold sway. Automobiles will not be allowed in the grounds all day to permit children to roll their eggs in safety.

'Get Out the Vote,' Colladay Demand

Urging city-wide participation in the April 30 referendum on District suffrage, Edward F. Colladay, president of the Board of Trade, yesterday declared, "We can never get anywhere in solving Washington's problems without national representation."

Colladay said he would request the board's national representation committee, at its meeting early this week, to formulate plans for "getting out the vote," including arrangements for excusing employes from work for half an hour in cases where they would otherwise be unable to get to the polls.

Mail Service Guard Robbed, Cab Driver Held With Girl, 19

A cab driver and a 19-year-old girl were in custody last night in connection with the robbery of Thomas D. Hall, 903 B street northeast, a guard in the Railway Mail Service.

Hall was robbed of $32 in the suspect's cab, he told detectives yesterday. Policemen R. J. James and P. J. Burton, of the Eleventh Precinct, arrested the suspects and recovered the wallet.

Hall said the couple asked him to ride around with them and, after several hours, he found at Sixty-first and East Capitol streets he had been robbed.

No charges had been placed against either of the suspects.

Two Breakfasts Feature Easter Social Calendar

200 Turn Out for Gala Morning Affair at Friendship, Estate of Mrs. McLean; Keating Party Also Attracts Many Notables.

As much an Easter tradition in the Capital as bunnies, egg-rolling, and yellow cotton chickens are Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean's annual breakfasts on this holiday, another one of which was held yesterday at Friendship, the estate of the hostess on Winconsin avenue.

While about 200 of the most important or most amusing, or both, of our citizens were celebrating there, a smaller number, but equally interesting group, gathered at the Women's National Democratic Club, where Mr. and Mrs. Edward Keating were entertaining at another Easter breakfast. They started theirs three years ago, and so successful have these parties been in the past that the hosts intend to go right on and make them a tradition.

Spring Clothes At Mrs. McLean's

Despite the cloudy skies and generally dank atmosphere, a large number of Mrs. McLean's guests blossomed out in stunning spring outfits. Others, such as Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., made a concession to the weather and wore tailored suits or darker clothes. Mrs. Robert's tailleur was gray, and with it she wore a simple cut blouse. As usual, she was minus a hat.

Edward Beale McLean, jr., whose engagement to Miss Anne Carroll Meem was announced recently, received with his mother, his sister, Miss Evalyn McLean, and his pretty blonde fiancee. The latter and her sister, Miss Eleanor Meem, were dressed in navy-blue cape frocks.

The hostess wore a street-length gown, a flowered print and a large black felt hat. As usual, she glittered and sparkled with jeweled bracelets and the inevitable Hope diamond.

Probably the largest branches of double cherry blossoms ever assembled by a Capital hostess decorated the hallway and the long drawing room adjoining. The tables were centered with masses of spring flowers, and white Easter bunnies, chocolate eggs, and little baskets filled with candy lent an appropriate note.

Recently returned from Florida, Mrs. Harry A. Woodring accompanied her husband, the Secretary of War. Another former member of the Florida colony present was Lady Lewis, who only got back a day or so ago from her home in Palm Beach. Her husband, Sir Willmott Lewis, was also present.

Miss Nancy Leiter, who has been at Johns Hopkins for several weeks, returned to the Capital in time for Mrs. McLean's luncheon. She wore a blue frock. Her grandmother, Mrs. John R. Williams, was also present.

Mrs. McLean likes to mingle all circles at her parties from labor leaders to diplomats to economic royalists. So it was not surprising to catch a glimpse of John L. Lewis, who was accompanied by Mrs. Lewis, the latter wearing a flowered frock with a silver fox cape.

An official touch was added to the luncheon by the presence of Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg. Mrs. William Borah, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Senator and Mrs. Alva Adams, and Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge. Mrs. Lodge topped off her navy blue frock with a broad-brimmed hat.

Princess Margaret Bon Compagni, another guest, wore a glittering gown of blue and silver lame, with a small hat. From out-of-town had come Mr. and Mrs. Henry Doherty, who saw much of Mrs. McLean this winter during the time she was at Palm Beach; Joseph Hergesheimer, and Mrs. Blaine Beale, aunt of the hostess.

Among members of the younger set present at the luncheon was Charles van der Straten-Ponthoz, son of the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz. His parents spent the week-end at Hot Springs, Va.

Other guests at the luncheon included Mrs. Dolly Gann, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. John Allan Daugherty, M. and Mme. Edgar Prochnik, with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jean de Sibour; Mrs. James J. Davis, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hogan.

Folk Music Enlivens Keating Luncheon

Mr. and Mrs. Keating always plan some sort of an interesting program for their breakfasts, and yesterday was no exception. Olam Lomax, who has charge of the folk music archives at the Library of Congress, and John Vance, law librarian at the library, sang a number of songs from collections they have made of American folk lore, accompanying themselves on their guitars.

Wilbur Hubbard, who comes from Maryland, told several amusing anecdotes collected on the Eastern Sho'. With Mrs. Keating acting as mistress of ceremonies, several prominent Senators made amusing and to-the-point speeches. These included Senator Alva Adams, Senator Ernest Lundeen, Senator Homer T. Bone, Senator Kenneth McKellar, Senator Edwin C. Johnson, Senator Hattie Caraway, Representative James M. Mead, and Mrs. Harry Blair.

The guests were seated at a number of small tables, centered with spring flowers, from the garden of Mrs. Oswald Svchuette, one of those present. She had discovered on a shopping tour the quaint little holders in which the flowers were placed.

Senator and Mrs. Adams were accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Joseph Uhl, of Pueblo, Colo., who is visiting them. Another out-of-town visitor at the breakfast was Mrs. William H. Alexander, of Pennsylvania, a retiring vice president of the D. A. R. She has been asked to become chairman of the Women's Division of Chatauqua.

Mr. Keating is editor of Labor, the weekly newspaper, Colorado was formerly his home.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

OF PURELY SOCIAL NOTE:

A number of dinners will precede the White Ball on Friday evening, April 29. Prince and Princess Leonide Ourusoff are among those entertaining, as are Lieut. and Mrs. Hubert Chanler. They will have numerous guests dining with them before the dance, which will benefit the White Russian colony in Washington.

• • • •

MR. AND MRS. Chauncey Parker, jr., will spend a "local" summer. They have leased the home of Mrs. Amory Perkins in Middleburg, and will also use it as a week-end pied-a-terre when such exciting things as horse races take place in the hunting country. Meanwhile, Mrs. Perkins plans to move next month into her new home, about a mile up the road from her present one.

• • • •

WITH the ending of Holy week yesterday, Washington's greatest institutoin, the cocktail party, got going again. One of the most successful on yesterday's calendar was that given by two bachelors, Eugene O'Dunne and Stephen Spingarn, in honor of Christine Ekengren and her fiance, Richard Hawkins.

Masses of people jammed their apartment on H street, among them Miss Elsie Ekengren, sister of the future bride; Miss Laura Tuckerman, who was very Easterish in a smart black tailored suit and a matching hat with a veil; Mrs. Horace Peters, brave in a straw hat, but making concessions to the weather and wearing a fur coat over her spring frock; Miss Ruth Tuckerman and her sister, Mrs. Benjamin Byas; Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Charles Watson and Henry Stansbury, William McComb; Lieut. and Mrs. John Maude, Miss Betty Shouse, wearing a gray coat with a large collar; Mr. and Mrs. Nils Asten, who are among those entertaining for the future bride, and Miss Patty Parker.

The much-feted guest of honor wore a gray tweed coat over a black frock, gray hat and a corsage of gardenias.

• • • •

MR. AND MRS. George Howe were others entertaining between 5 and 7 yesterday. They had invited a very few friends in for a drink at their Georgetown residence.

Among those who stopped by were Robert Coe, Prince and Princess Ourusoff, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, Mrs. Granger Blair, and Miss Anne Perin.

Mrs. Howe had to leave her party before it ended in order to catch a train back to New York, where she has a big job with a department store.

THE LEGION of Smith College alumnae in Washington is disappointed that the president of Smith, Dr. William Allan Neilson, is going to spend only a brief time in the Capital when he comes next week-end to make an address on Shakespeare at the Folger Library.

Few college presidents have quite the hold on their students that President Neilson has. His witticisms have spread throughout the land, via the newspapers and magazines, but we believe this story about him has never before appeared in print: In the newspaper published by the students of nearby Amherst College once appeared the statement that Smith girls were easy to kiss. So indignant were President Neilson's students at this slur on their dignity that they rose up and demanded that he denounce all of Amherst in chapel. When they met there to hear the forthcoming burst of wrath, their beloved president restrained his comment on the situation by saying simply, "Remember, girls, gentlemen never tell."

PICTURE OF A WOMAN
Using a TELEPHONE

YOU can hardly pick up a single magazine or newspaper without seeing at least one advertisement with an illustration like this—a lady using a telephone—and most of them are not telephone company advertisements either.

Shopping by telephone, ordering food and household supplies, ordering things from the drug store and a legion of other daily uses for the telephone have been discovered by the ladies. Merchants know this and they know it's wise to bid for this telephone trade. And that is why you see so many of their advertisements carrying pictures of a lady using a telephone.

Are you using your telephone for all it is worth?

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Medical Student Tells 'Worried' to 'Stick to Guns;' Other Correspondents Advise 'Perplexed Mother.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young medical student, but all the knowledge I have gained from textbooks does not compare with the wisdom I learned from experience, through my own impatient eagerness and selfishness. For some time I have read with interest the advice you give to those suffering from emotional maladjustments, but it was not until I read your advice, given April 11 to the young lady who signed herself "Worried," that I decided to offer the findings of my experience for what it is worth.

* * * *

"Worried" has been urged by the boy she loves to "belong to him just once," as proof of her love. She shrinks from the thought, feeling it is neither wise nor right, yet is afraid she may lose him if she does not accede to his wish. Here is my story: Just about two years ago I was engaged to a girl, the like of whom I have not found since. Our engagement met with the approval of both families, but because we were both students, marriage at the time was impossible.

* * * *

I know this girl loved me with as sweet and as pure a love as any girl can offer to a man, and I loved her. My one fear was that of losing her during the time we would have to wait for each other. As proof of our love, and as some security to myself, I asked her the same question that was put to "Worried." I thought it would be enough to have her belong to me just once, but we both found that once was not enough.

* * * *

Sometimes, as I think things over in retrospect, I cannot believe that that person was really myself. Whenever she went out, whenever she received a telephone call, I became suspicious and jealous, condemning her until I literally drove her from me. Then I realized that the one proof of love for her that I could have given, I refused; that my own desires, over eagerness and impulsiveness, cost me the one thing I wanted most. The girl is now living in another State and the last words she ever spoke to me were these: "You have destroyed something beautiful which could have been lasting."

* * * *

From my own experience, I know that if this young fellow really loved "Worried," he would wait for her; his love for her would be stronger than his own personal desires. As you advised "Worried," once isn't enough; it is merely the beginning; and the secrecy, the concealment that is necessary, tears at one's very soul and results in a nervous instability that leads to quarrels and destroys love. I still love this girl; I know she no longer loves me, but I have entered into a profession where the only proof of my love I can give to her is by helping those less fortunate than I.

* * * *

I hope "Worried" reads my letter, and that she will "stick to her guns." If this fellow really loves her, he will admire her for it. There is no doubt that belonging to someone you love is the greatest happiness that can exist, but when a man places a proposition to a girl such as this fellow placed to "Worried," that isn't love; it is anything but.

ONE OF THE BOYS.

A. M. A. Pamphlet Cited.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to suggest a book—or rather, a pamphlet—to that "Perplexed Mother" whose letter was published in your column of April 9, asking how to counsel her 18-year-old daughter, who says she never wants to fall in love or to be married, because she regards the marriage relationship as "horrible, disgusting and sordid." The pamphlet I have in mind is called "The Age of Romance," was written by Dr. Thurman B. Rice, and is issued by the Bureau of Health and Public Instruction of the American Medical Association. It approaches the subject from both the spiritual and physical angles, and is well worth study by young and old. It can be obtained by sending 25 cents to the American Medical Association, 535 North Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill.

Opinion of Three Women.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three young women, past girlhood, two of whom have been married for some time, do not agree with your advice to "Perplexed Mother" regarding her 18-year-old daughter's aversion to marriage. The 18-year-old girl who says she cannot imagine marriage because she dislikes the idea of intimacy is not an abnormal girl . . . When I was very young I was appalled at the ignorance of adults who had the thankless job of "raising" me. I made mental notes of facts apparently unknown to parents and resolved to remember them in case a young person was ever intrusted to my care.

* * * *

One of these facts is that some young girls do not dream of marriage, nor even think of it, as the ideal estate. Girls who are virginal in mind must be led by circumstance into a state of romantic anticipation of love. . . (They) refuse to be led by such circumstances as appear to them common place, uncompelling, or less real and important than school, present personal ambitions, or the firm, reassuring consciousness of possession of their own souls. These girls are commonly the ones who manage to accomplish a little before they die. And . . . many of them marry, and are happy.

* * * *

One other thing and I shall quit: Adults who tell children that sexual union is a symbol of psychic union do so at the risk of spoiling some future marriages. As nearly as my friends can tell, there never has been such a thing as psychic unity between men and women, but only, at the very best, a nicely balanced mixture of friendship, admiration and romantic ardor . . . It would be much wiser and would have the virtue of appealing to the intelligence of the young girl who is the storm center of all this to recommend sex in terms of maturity and family life . . . But the advice of all three of us is: let her alone; agree with her. Assist her to change her social environment, if that is what she wishes, and see whether she, or the mushing maidens of her acquaintance, make better companions and wives, five years from now. MRS. M. V. D.

Speaking of Unity.

(COLUMNIST'S NOTE: The mental attitude toward marriage which gives rise to this letter—which has been blue-penciled with the idea of retaining its essential and, possibly, helpful points, and omitting those which are relatively unimportant and, possibly, confusing—is singularly lacking in spiritual approach to what can be the noblest human relationship. By man's spirit alone does he differ from the animal kingdom. And whoever is blind to—or denies—spiritual values and overtones in life and human relationships is of necessity bound to stop short at a "nicely balanced mixture of friendship, admiration and romantic ardor" in the marriage relationship. But, as I see it, these same elements are characteristic of 99 out of every 100 flirtations and casual, passing attractions. Much more than this is needed to unite two lives on one solid, indestructible base. That plus will be found in the realm of the spirit. Granted that minds and bodies can never achieve an authentic and lasting satisfying merger, nevertheless, all those who possess spiritual awareness know that the spirit affords the medium for bridging the chasm; that the dynamic and indestructible union of two personalities is only to be achieved through the medium of the spirit.)

VERY GAY 90'S is this suit with its matching topcoat, fashioned of black wool. Both suit and coat are finished with a severe little band of black velvet—a smart trimming method this spring. The coat may accompany other suits and frocks; prints particularly are a chic affinity to the simple black wool coat. For accent with the coat, a gold and sapphire pin at the neckline of the blouse and an identification tag bracelet of enormous gold links are distinctive features. With the suit is worn a pin of modern design in gold and diamonds and a flexible gold and sapphire bracelet. Merry Widow hats complete the quaintly smart ensembles.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 17.

FROM OUR POINT OF view, the Big Parade is over. We have duly displayed what finery we could muster, and are again ready to take up the routine of living. But as I scud around the stores of the town at this particular time, I find long since forgotten the feast day procession. This morning they are saying to themselves, what now?

The great department stores along the avenue have begun their post-Easter battle for customers—complicated, as of 1938, by several difficult factors. They have planned their campaigns with all the strategy of high-class generals. One of the matters which complicates the storekeeper's business this spring is the lateness of Easter, for we are now so well along in the season that there will be practically no time for the usual clearance drives before the summer buying and selling. Another factor is the brakes put upon business by the current de, re or something cession.

None the less, they are facing the next few months with courage and hope. Several of them tell me that from now until hot weather they intend to push those items which have already done well this spring—some fashion items, and especially novelties and the accessory gadgets which have been so astonishingly popular lately. This will take care of things, they hope, until we bustle in to buy, if and when, our summer raiment.

* * * *

I think these back-of-the-counter plans are of great interest to us who buy, just as it is fascinating to know what goes on in a general's mind while his battle rages. I have no doubt that all over the country storekeepers are mapping out their plans of campaign, just as ours are along the haughty avenue. And this matter also interests us vitally, for these big stores are excellent barometers. If they do pretty well so shall we, I hope.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Just about the happiest and healthiest looking young couple in town at the moment are Warren Pershing and Muriel Richards, who are to be married in a few days. The old general's gallant fight back from the abyss, naturally, made them extra joyful, and at El Morocco the other night their smiles lighted up the dance floor. A handsome pair, these, and just about the best dancers in town . . .

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Spring Cleaning.

THIS TIME you are going to be perfectly ruthless. No other house in the world has so much junk as yours. And all because you are so chicken-hearted. Well, you are going to throw everything out and become efficient, streamlined and modern.

* * * *

You start with the closets, pull out the piles of old magazines and boxes of old letters. Well, of course you can't throw away the National Geographics on account of the pictures . . . and the Harpers', well they have so many good articles if you could once get around to them . . . but you WILL get rid of the Saturday Evening Posts—still you never can tell when George may want to look up some back number. Maybe you'd just better take all the magazines to the basement until you can decide what to do with them.

You start sorting the old letters. A phrase catches your eyes. You read on . . . and on. Here! this will never do! You will take the whole lot out and make a bonfire. Still, it seems so—so irrevocable. There they lie—all those little embalmed fragments of people's minds and spirits—no, you cannot destroy them. Besides, if you ever wrote a novel, they would come in handy. And it will be nice when you get older to sit by the fireside and read them . . . and muse over the past. And then you want to leave your descendants something to find in the attic.

* * * *

You assail the bookcases square-jawed and determined. You pick up an armload of college yearbooks. They will be a good riddance; they always made you feel like Methusaleh anyway. Still if George should miss them . . . and besides you might want to look up the age of an old schoolmate. Oh well, you'll put them in the basement.

You pull out several fancifully bound Christmas gift books. You open them, look at the inscriptions, then slowly put them back. Well, there's all those funny musty old books, "Fauna and Flora of Ancient Egypt," "Walks and Talks in the Geological Field,"—what's the use of keeping them? Still they look sort of quaint. They might be some kind of first editions. You put them back, take up a copy of Longfellow's poems. Nobody reads him any more—still he might come back. . . .

When you have finished with the bookcases, you have only three Graustarkian novels ready for the secondhand man.

* * * *

WELL YOU ARE going to do something desperate about the pictures and the objects d'art. The fish are going to come out of the dining room—still Aunt Sallie gave them to you and when she comes this summer to visit . . . Well, anyway, there's that dark old seascape in the living room that gives you the creeps—still you and George started housekeeping with it . . . and he never likes big things to be moved. Well, those pictures of Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort—still they belonged to George's grandmother and maybe you'd better not. You'll just go after some of the later stuff, those Japanese prints in those hideous little frames—still Sister won them in her art essay contest. She'd have a fit. Well, anyway, some of those vases have got to go—but what will you do for places to put your flowers? If you could just move that calendar off the mantel—still everybody would be shouting "What's the date? Who took the calendar?"

* * * *

At the end of the day you sit down in your overstuffed chair, beside your ornate reading lamp and survey your seascape. Your bookcases are double stacked, your mantel crowded with catch-alls. Things, things everywhere. No smooth, shiny surfaces. No wide open spaces.

Well, maybe some day when the children are grown you will move into a nice modernistic apartment. Throw EVERYTHING away and start from scratch.

YOUR FIGURE, SIR!

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE VIVID MEMORY of a time when the flag on Capitol Hill stood at half-mast half the time is what makes members of Congress so regular in their attendance at the House Office Building gymnasium. In a single term, 28 members of the House of Representatives died of heart attacks and other diseases induced by overwork, confinement, long hours and lack of exercise. That was the year in which stalwart James M. Mead, member from Buffalo, N. Y., began his drive for the present gymnasium.

A small fund had already been collected in previous attempts to establish a place where the representatives could go regularly for physical recreation needed to offset a grueling routine. By this time the members of the House were genuinely interested in making a success of the venture and 35 of them started the gymnasium.

The gymnasium membership has grown now to 100, and in all there are 200 members of Congress who drop in for an occasional game or a workout under the direction of Peter Henderson, former Army drill sergeant, in charge, who is known as "The Boss."

Paddle Ball Popular.

The Boss admits that the gym members who play for exercise are more regular than the ones who appear for reducing purposes, because the average member of Congress is competitive at heart and thoroughly enjoys matching himself in a game against a political adversary. Although there are no politics in connection with the gymnasium, it very often happens that the Republicans and Democrats play on opposite teams. The biggest job, the Boss tells me, is to referee four lawyers who are used to putting up good strong arguments.

The most popular game is paddle ball, which is similar to handball but less strenuous since it requires less bending. Gym members also like paddle tennis, badminton and deck tennis . . . and they are particularly proud of their baseball diamond, which is a decided inducement to exercise.

In addition to these games, the gym is resplendent with all the equipment that makes exercise more interesting—an electric horse, treadmill, an electric belt reducer (which, by the way, is very popular since it does the work), rowing machines, punching bag, training bag, chest weights, vaulting horse and suspended ladder. All this equipment was made possible by the "gym fund."

No Cost to Government.

So that you taxpayers will approve the idea of this expenditure for equipment, I hasten to explain that the "gym fund" all comes out of the representatives' pockets. Each member of the gymnasium subscribes $5 annually for replacement and new equipment and all the Government supplies is the space.

Mr. Henderson keeps an eagle watch over the legislators to see that they do not outdo themselves.

Paddle Ball Is Best Liked Game; Trainer Called 'The Boss.'

In the games he makes sure the opposing teams are fairly evenly matched and outlines special exercises as required by various members.

No man over 45 ever is allowed to use a skip rope and the man with the corporation front is advised against extensive backward bending exercise. The older representative who is unable to take exercise is encouraged to make use of the fully equipped hydrotherapy department.

Athletes Most Remiss.

In spite of the growing enthusiasm for exercise, some of the House members still wait until they are ordered to the gymnasium by their doctors. Surprisingly enough, Mr. Henderson has found, the former college athlete is often in this class.

As a general rule, the gymnasium draws its largest crowd around 5 o'clock in the afternoon, or following adjournment. Sometimes a hard-working representative may leave his desk, go to the gym for a quick workout and be back at the grind within the hour with energies revived and the capacity for work increased.

In the year that so many deaths occurred there was neither a House physician nor a gymnasium. Now there are both and to them the representatives give credit for improving health and a lower death rate.

"More precisely, I should say that the Administration has done nothing constructive to help and encourage business. On the contrary the Administration has acted to discourage and dishearten business during this critical period. You know to what I refer. You remember the oratorical floggings given to business several months ago by the Roosevelt Secretary of the Interior and his Solicitor General. You remember the confusing, contradictory statements that emanated from the White House in recent months.

Conditions Listed.

"One day, you will recall, we were told all holding companies should be abolished. The next week we were told holding companies should not be abolished. Another week we were told that Government should fight business and end monopoly, and the next week we were told business should learn to cooperate.

"But in the third week the Justice Department sought a grand jury indictment against business enterprises that had tried to co-operate along the lines suggested by the President. And then of course you remember about the prices. First they were too low and then the President said they were too high and now he once more thinks they are too low.

"How could business go ahead under such circumstances? Is it any wonder that the merchant as well as the manufacturer is confused as to his future and asks where will we go? Is it any wonder they have become frightened as to what their Federal Government may do to them? And their confusion and fright will not be allayed by the program which the President has placed before Congress.

"Mr. Roosevelt's spending proposal is bad enough but his sudden reversion to monetary and credit dealings must seriously disturb every person familiar with the history of the ruin and havoc in every country which has tried that road.

"The undisputed facts are that our banks long have been filled with idle money. Interest rates have been low. There is no need to create any more bank credit. What is needed are prospective borrowers who see an opportunity in private enterprise to make a reasonable profit and a reasonable chance to pay back the loan.

"What is needed is to instill confidence of the future in the minds of men, and that cannot be done by the admission that inflation and spending are the New Deal's only answer to our economic ailments. Actually the New Deal has expanded credit to bolster up the Government bond market in support of the enormous spending program proposed by the President.

Says "You" Will Pay.

"Again the President leaves unanswered in his message to Congress two very important questions, namely, who is going to spend the approximately $5,000,000,000 he asks and from where is this stupendous sum of money coming? Once again the President has asked Congress to give him what amounts to a blank check to do as he pleases.

"But I am certain that Congress will no longer surrender its authority over the Nation's purse strings. I am certain that Congress this year will carefully earmark whatever sums it sees fit to appropriate. The days of blank check appropriations in this country are over.

"The question however remains: Who will pay this bill? Ultimately you will pay it, regardless of whether you are a farmer, a factory worker, a merchant, a banker or an industrialist. The old New Deal theory that only the rich pay the costs of Government long has been exploded along with other New Deal fallacies. As Mr. Roosevelt said in 1932, 'Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors.' You will pay for this flood of spending, not alone in taxes but in the damage done to our entire economic structure by the addition of another crushing burden to our already too large national debt."

Calls for Coalition.

Senator Vandenberg said he believed a united effort along the lines proposed by a coalition of Democratic and Republican Senators last December would turn the tide in 90 days. He continued:

"I do not believe that another 'pump priming' adventure, as now proposed by the President, can possibly turn the tide. A decision in this matter is, as the President says, desperately important 'to the security of our people and the stability of our economic life.'

"I agree with the President that the national income must be increased. But we can get new purchasing power only by getting more production in business as distinguished from Government. What hurts legitimate business hurts your pocket book, decreases buying power, defeats recovery and stifles jobs. That is precisely what is happening today.

"The taxes and deficts and lack of business confidence incidental to our last 'pump priming' spree are substantially responsible. The 'pump primers' had their chance. And now we have their depression. The new question now is: Does America want more of the same? Or more fundamentally: Can America stand mere of the same?

"There have been heated denials of a certain parable which was said to have been told the President a few days ago. But the parable is sound, although its authorship remains anonymous. This is the parable:

"'You must let the cattle put on fat. The Administration cowboys constantly whoop and race about the cattle as soon as they start to graze until the herd becomes too nervous and too scared to eat. Yet there is plenty of grass for all.'"

Hill Scores G. O. P.

"So I plead for a 'united front' in the right place and in the right way. The Government should retrench; not leap to new 'pump priming' profligacy. We should give business a real chance to do the job that Government cannot do but which Government very definitely can make impossible."

The Republican Party, as well as Senator Vandenberg personally, was criticized by Senator Hill in his defense of the President's proposals. The Alabaman said:

"As I have listened to Senator Vandenberg tonight, it has been hard to believe that I was listening to a Senator responsible for the human welfare of 5,000,000 people of Michigan, let alone the accepted spokesman for the Republican party which pretends to be concerned with the welfare of all the 120,000,000 people of the whole United States.

"I do not propose that the people of my State, or of any State, rot in uselessness as so many people did during the Hoover depression. The people of Alabama as late as January of this year expressed themselves as definitely in favor of the President's program.

"When the rest of the country goes to the ballot this fall, I am convinced that the results will be equally clear in showing the great mass of the people behind the humanitarian program of our President—Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

"When you hear the opponents of the President talk about how much his program is going to cost they talk about billions and billions until you are dizzy. That you and I may have a real idea of how much this program is going to cost, let me talk about the cost in terms which you and I are used to in our daily affairs.

Holds Expense Small.

"Three billion dollars is $24 apiece for every man, woman and child in this country. The average income of all the American people this year is $450 for each man, woman and child.

"Suppose for the moment that you as an individual have exactly the average income of $450. The President has suggested that you allow your Government to spend $24 on your account for public works to stimulate business.

"On the basis of past experience your income will probably increase $100, to $550, as the result of this expenditure of $24. This, then, is the question you have to consider. If we can raise your income from $450 to $550, are you willing to pay back the $24. If you are willing to pay back the cost there will be no inflation."

profits tax principle, as voted by the Senate, would lead President Roosevelt to veto the tax bill. This would make it necessary to delay adjournment to pass another measure or leave the more controverted levies of the 1936 act in force for another year. The Senate group insists that this tax, generally opposed by business, should be repealed. It insists the House membership would support repeal if given a chance to vote on it and that President Roosevelt would accept repeal if embodied in the bill.

Both Senator Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Representative Doughton, head of the House Ways and Means Committee, expressed hope last night that the conferees would progress toward an agreement today. A break in the negotiations is expected if no move toward accord develops soon, for, as Doughton conceded, "there's no use meeting if we can't do something."

The Borah amendment, adopted by a one-vote margin in the Senate, which would impose normal income taxes as well as surtaxes on future issues of Federal securities, has not been reached by the conferees.

The suggestion has been made that the Senate conferees might offer to recede from the Borah amendment in exchange for concessions by the House group on the undistributed profits and capital gains issues. Representative Doughton laughingly denied the idea of such a trade last night saying he did not think the Senators believed the Borah amendment would make much of a "swap" and indicating they probably were afraid the House conferees might accept such a proposal.

The question of taxes, it was shown in a preliminary program released last night by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, will occupy a prominent place at that organization's annual meeting here, May 2-5. The Nation's business leaders will discuss the rising tax burden and the huge new relief and spending-lending program of the President.

These discussions are expected to complicate problems of Congress, especially in its consideration of the New Deal spending program which will be under way about that time.

A significant absence of New Deal spokesmen was noted on the Chamber of Commerce program although both President Roosevelt and Attorney General Homer S. Cummings were invited to address the meeting. Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring and Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, are the only Federal officials listed as speakers. Admiral Land will outline plans for rehabilitating the merchant marine and Woodring will discuss national defense.

However, outstanding critics of the Administration do appear on the program. Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, will speak on Government economy and Senator Edward R. Burke, also a Democrat, of Nebraska, will discuss "Proper Government Functions."

The report was made by Dr. Abraham White, of Yale, age 30. He will receive the $1,000 Eli Lilly and Company award in biological chemistry, when the chemical society opens its 95th meeting here tomorrow. He is assistant professor of physiological chemistry. He credited as coworkers Prof. H. N. Long, Dr. H. R. Catchpole and Dr. Kurt G. Stern of the Yale staff.

Two thousand chemists are expected to attend a four-day meeting here.

The picture of "How We Are Made" from the Yale chemistry laboratories deals with hormones. These are the products of ductless glands that regulate sex, health and many of the phases of personality.

So far, Dr. White said, all these hormones prove to be made of only two basic substances, either proteins or sterols. The latter are alcohols. The sex and the adrenal gland hormones are made basically of sterols. The adrenals, located just above the kidneys, are one set of the energy making glands.

All the other hormones as far as know, Dr. White said, are proteins. The pituitary gland is known to produce at least five distinct hormones. These are the milk-regulating prolactin, sex and adrenal gland regulators, growth, diabetic regulators, and thyroid gland governors.

Together these hormones make the pituitary the "master gland" of the human body. For more than ten years chemists have been trying to purify and crystallize one of the pituitary hormones to see just what it is made of. When that is done, these life regulators can be manufactured artificially and cheaply in chemical retorts.

The fact that the new crystal is a protein, Dr. White explained, means that the hardest part of the job is yet ahead. For protein molecules are so gigantic that chemists do not yet know how to take them apart.

Yet, Dr. White said, this problem must be solved. Because chemists have already discovered that vitamins are proteins and that all the viruses yet isolated are pure proteins. The viruses cause infantile paralysis, colds, flu and many other diseases.

The Yale group has obtained at least a good peek at the solution. Dr. White said it appears there are four ways these giant protein molecules produce their seeming miracles or disasters.

One, they carry a nonprotein substance which does the work. An example is the iron in protein in the blood. The iron carries oxygen.

Two, an unusual acid is attached to the protein molecule. An example is the acid which carries iodine in proteins of the thyroid gland.

Gaily Garbed Crowds Throng Chevy Chase Church

Federal Spending Will Bring Panic, Landon Declares

Topeka, Kans., April 17 (U.P.).—Administration spending is forcing the United States along a well-defined path toward inflation and a panic which "will go far deeper and will be a more vicious thing than any we have experienced," Alf M. Landon said tonight.

"It takes a long time for the virus of inflation to work, but its work is sure," the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee said.

Referring to the $4,500,000,000 lending-spending program which President Roosevelt recommended to Congress to combat the recession, Landon told the United Press that any benefits to be derived from such a plan would be "only casual and temporary."

High Geared BLUE SUNOCO THE ONLY TRUE BLUE MOTOR FUEL Wins

Here's a story of motor fuel superiority . . . told, not by its manufacturer, but by the most critical of its users:—owners of new cars with high-compression engines. These experienced drivers ranked Blue Sunoco first by 57.5% more votes than the next highest on the list . . . gave it 95% as many votes as the next two gasolines put together. Certainly, facts like these should convince you that High Geared Blue Sunoco is the motor fuel for your car . . . because:—since new cars require a better gasoline to perform satisfactorily, such a gasoline will obviously perform with at least equal satisfaction in older cars.

ROTUNDA WHISPERS: Some hefty wisecracks about the treatment of Frochnik, the ex-Austrian Minister, were trimmed from the Gridiron dinner skits, so as not to endanger a pension from Berlin which Ambassador Dieckhoff is rumored to be urging for him . . . Garner, Hull and Farley have vowed privately that F. D. R. shan't be the hero of the 1940 big circus. They're loyal, of course, but stop Roosevelt is the slogan. Not stop him, exactly, either; just keep him from getting too far out in front; for the good of the party, naturally. Only a rumor.

The Illinois primaries remind me of the Chicago political henchman I encountered at a ward headquarters one election day who was mortified because he had voted only 19 times. A rumor spread yesterday that Jim Farley had beaten the State Department to recognition of Berlin's conquest of Austria; scouts reported that there was no Austria on the marble world map on the floor of the Postoffice branch downstairs below Mr. Farley's offices on the Avenue . . .

I hastened over, map in hand, to compare. Sure enough, Austria appears merely as a part of Germany. But it turned out that Austria had never been on this map, even before the putsch. Another of my favorite countries, Switzerland, also appears as part of Germany. (I hope this isn't an omen.)

"—No. 1 targets in next war"

To judge by what the military attaches say at Washington cocktail parties, the bombarding of cities and villages (with the emphasis on schools) will be standard practice in the next world war.

In fact, it appears that it might become a court-martial offense for aviators to waste their bombs on anything but schools and kindergartens, on the theory that nothing destroys an enemy population's morale so much as to have its moppets killed, not to mention the elimination of veterans of future wars.

Free medical treatment for underprivileged children who will start to school in the fall was promised yesterday by the District Medical Society in support of the "summer round-up" program sponsored by Washington Parent-Teacher associations.

Under direction of Mrs. Alma Hudson, the round-up will run through May to uncover physical defects of prospective school children and permit time for their treatment in the summer.

Dr. John H. McLeod, representative of the medical society, said that the society would provide physicians to examine needy children.

Worst Enemy Is Despair, Say Social Agencies

The Washington Council of Social Agencies yesterday classified man's worst enemies as disease, distress and despair—and pointed out that welfare agencies today are shifting emphasis toward need for elimination of the last named.

Although social work originated as a service for families whose lives were overburdened with economic problems, it was declared in the council's annual report, recognition of the importance of providing "understanding and help that will strengthen capacities of the individual to deal more adequately with his difficulties" has grown steadily.

"Hence, increasing emphasis has been placed on the value of skilled case work service in helping people on the road to rehabilitation," the report stated.

Problem Worse Today.

The difficulty of turning attention to the fight against despair, which would "strengthen the quality of family life in the city," is greater in Washington today than when relief funds were more adequate, the report declared.

"In the coming year," it was declared, "the Family Welfare Committee will continue to work for a more adequate program of service and relief. An investigation, proposed by Congress, of the need for and administration of public relief in the District will be of the greatest importance."

"Serious Implications."

Attention was also called to "serious implications for the child welfare program of the District" in that the appropriation bill for the next fiscal year omits provision for the National Training School for Girls after July 1.

"After January 1, 1939, the Receiving Home for Children will be transferred from the Board of Public Welfare to the Woman's Bureau. Both of these changes have serious implications. The committee realizes the need for long-range social planning and for more effectively acquainting the public with better ways of assuring the welfare of children in the District," the report concludes.

Harbinger of Summer, Circus Arrives Today

Harbingers of summer descending on the District include the Johnny J. Jones Shows, which will unload this morning from a special train in the Baltimore & Ohio yards for an indefinite stay beginning Wednesday. The show will exhibit on a lot at Twenty-first and C streets northeast.

This year's performance will be the show's twenty-fifth birthday in Washington, where it is opening its 1938 season, coming directly from winter quarters at Augusta, Ga.

Roosevelt Hears Rector's Plea To World to Use Christ's Way

Easter's Lesson Is to Love Sincerity and Truth, Says the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson at St. Thomas Church.

"At Easter morning services attended by President Roosevelt and his family, the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas, urged the troubled world to solve its problems by accepting the philosophy of Christ.

The "spirit of materialism and selfishness" abounds individually, nationally and internationally, Dr. Wilkinson said. The lesson of the Easter Day, he stated, is "to love those things which make for sincerity and truth."

Dr. Wilkinson asked, "Of what value is any faith in a risen Lord or any faith in immortality unless these lives of ours offer a convincing and compelling point in favor of such faith?"

First Congregational.

Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, speaking at the First Congregational Church, said that not all the mysteries of the universe can be penetrated by science.

"As for Life, wherein microscopic germ cells carry the innumerable potentialities which make of one pair a Beethoven and of another pair an insect, such mysteries are too high, we cannot attain to them," he declared.

Citing experiments in telepathy and clairvoyance recently published by Prof. J. . Rhine, Dr. Abbot concurred in believing that "occasional persons may have powers of reception beyond the rest of us, which may embrace messages from the beyond. The bearing of this, too, on prayer is obvious."

At Eldbrooke M. E.

Christ's tranquility of soul was uppermost "in the midst of a world filled with hate, hostility and every kind of oppression," declared the Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, who spoke at Eldbrooke M. E. hurch.

Dr. Montgomery characterized Christ as "the supreme optimist of all time" who alone saw the unseen possibilities and virtues of human nature."

National City Christian.

"If Christ be not risen," declared Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller at National City Christian Church, "the faiths of men have to be emptied of all vitality, the hopes of men snuffed out and the glorious stories of heroism and adventure in the fields of human helpfulness and and social progress blotted from the golden book of life."

At Luther Place.

Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, addressing an Easter morning congregation at Luther Place Memorial Church, asserted that "the central drama of all history" is the Resurrection.

Dr. Wang's Message.

Expressing confidence that "right shall win," Dr. C. T. Wang, Chinese Ambassador, said in a message to the National Open Parish last night that "we believe we are fighting not only for our own existence, but also for order and peace among nations."

Dr. Wang, who was represented at the parish by Col. Thomas Tchou, former aide to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, stated that "on this Easter day the Chinese people are under the burden of a heavy cross," but "we feel we are not deserted and not alone." He said that "as Christians, we are confident because we believe in the Champion of Righteousness, who is the conqueror of all foes and obstacles, even death."

The meeting was in the Covenant First Presbyterian Church. Dr. William S. Culbertson presided.

Chinese Church.

The Senior Choir of the Chinese Community Church made its debut yesterday afternoon at Easter services in the auditorium of Mt. Vernon M. E. Church, South. Principal speaker was the Rev. Robert M. Skinner, pastor of Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

Groups of Chinese children presented recitations and songs, under direction of the Misses Elizabeth and Catherine Price. Dr. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese congregation, presided.

J. A. Green, Jr., 15, Gone Since Feb. 9, Found Drowned

A boy's body recovered from the Potomac at Treasure Cove yesterday was identified as that of John Alfred Green, jr., 15, missing since February 9 from his home at 1317 South Capitol street.

Justice of the Peace J. R. Creecy, issuing a certificate of death by drowning, announced he would hold a hearing on the case early this week.

On the day of his disappearance the lad returned from classes at Van Ness School, ate supper at home and then walked down the street toward the river, members of his family said, recalling that he liked to play along the waterfront in the evening.

928 Lots Cited For Cleanup In Campaign

Discovery of 928 vacant lots in the District by teams of Boy Scouts and Boys Club members as a part of the Cleanup Campaign was reported yesterday to the Junior Board of Commerce Clean-up Committee. Beginning today, committee members said, inspection of these lots will be begun and efforts will be made to have owners clean them or permit them to be cleaned by teams of boys, under sponsorship of the board.

The teams will compete in the campaign for trips to summer camps as prizes for their accomplishments in brightening the city.

Co-operation of parking lot owners will be asked in the campaign, according to John W. Brabner-Smith, chairman of the committee.

"Many complaints," he said, "have been received about the condition of parking lots, indicating we have a new problem to deal with in the efforts of citizens to improve and maintain the appearance of the city."

It was announced the National Park Service has given permission to the committee to clean and landscape one small public park in each of the 20 clean-up districts. Each District playground, Brabner-Smith said, has promised to clean a lot.

Back in town last night on borrowed money from a speaking trip to Jackson, Miss., he told of having been robbed of everything in his wallet, except a check for traveling expenses and some cards, while asleep on the train. He admitted ruefully a Pullman porter had managed to change him from an upper to a lower just before he turned in for the night.

School 'Kids' and Registerites Pay to See 'Benny' but Aid Spain

800 in Ballroom, 1,000 Outside Greet 'King of Swing;' Dozen Even Risk Necks to Peer in 11th Floor Windows.

Swing-hungry youngsters who scarcely have heard of the Spanish war vied with bright-eyed zealots and dignified matrons at the Hotel Raleigh last night as Benny Goodman "mowed 'em down" for the benefit of the loyalist cause—at $5.50 a couple.

Eight hundred people were in the ballroom and a thousand more high school boys and girls drove a dozen policemen and an unknown number of hotel detectives practically wild by unceasing efforts to crash this dance of dances and see their hero, the King of Swing.

Twelve youths and one girl even dared death to hear Benny jump into his super super blare—the Bugle Call Rag—by crawling out upon a narrow ledge 11 floors above the street to gape through vents. Others sneaked through fire escapes, pooled their resources for community tickets, attempted to catch trumpet snatches through washroom walls.

It was a geat night for everybody. High schoolers got their swing. Goodman got adulation. Friends of Spanish democracy collected an estimated $4,000.

Probably last night's session brought together the most motley attendance of any affair ever held here: The aforementioned leg-wigglers, Ambassador de los Rios and most of the Spanish colony; D. A. R. visitors who didn't think they'd like it, but did; Army and Navy and social registerites; members of practically every other orchestra in town; tourists, traveling salesmen, Government clerks, waiters, officials, debutantes; tuxedoes, full dress and red knitted sweaters; diamonds and high school fraternity pins.

Eldest attendant was 83-year-old Manuel Farle, of 5111 Cathedral avenue northwest. Veteran of three Spanish wars, Farle, a retired Spanish teacher and Department of Agriculture botanist, swung till the last trumpet toot.

And even that part of the crowd mortally fearing annihilation of loyalist forces wasn't downcast. Goodman, playing for the union minimum, amounting to little more than railway fare from New York, was there. Banknotes were piling into envelopes at ticket sellers' tables. Red carnations were selling by the gross.

There was Goodman, there was a dance floor, there was a moon. There were unbelievable cadences and blares and rhythms. And there was still a cause.

Jobs for D. C. Possible at Maryland U.

Washington's unemployed are likely to have some share in the construction of new buildings on the University of Maryland campus, part of a $2,380,000 WPA project, it was learned last night.

This was indicated by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, and E. Claude Gaylor, head of the Prince Georges County office of the United States Employment service.

Denying that he had announced suspension of WPA regulations requiring that 95 per cent of the labor be from relief roles, Dr. Byrd said he hoped some residents of Washington would be among those given employment on the project.

Regents to Decide.

The decision on how the problem would be handled, he said, would await action of the board of regents of the university, who are to meet this week, and later conferences with WPA officials.

Gaylor said last night that it would probably be necessary to waive the relief labor requirements. "I don't see how they can expect to put up those buildings with relief labor," he stated.

He pointed out that the small number of persons on relief in Prince Georges County, and the lack of skilled labor among the group, would prevent supplying the needed workers from relief rolls.

400 Jobs to Be Open.

But, Gaylor said, the project would be able to draw workers from the unemployed in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties and from Washington. He said there were about 2,200 unemployed in Prince Georges County.

Corrington Gill, assistant WPA administrator, said last night that suspension of the relief labor requirements could be ordered at the discretion of the Maryland State WPA director.

Among Washington's unemployed who may find some of the 400 or more jobs on the University of Maryland project are those for whom relief sources in the District have been closed by lack of funds. The Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare revealed last Friday that 80 per cent of applications for relief during the first three months of 1938 had been rejected. In March, 308 applications were approved out of 1,610 submitted.

Jackie Coogan Starts Action For Huge Sum

By Frederick C. Othman.

While Jackie sued his mother and his step-father for an accounting of the $4,000,000 he earned as the first of the Cinema waifs and thereby revealed the details of an almost incredible childhood, parents and guardians of current Hollywood children, such as Shirley Temple, Jane Withers, Freddie Bartholomew and many another, redoubled their efforts to insure the future of their charges.

At 23 years, young Coogan is a has-been, with hair prematurely thin', no training to take up any kind of career and financial affairs in such a sorry tangle that his bride now is paying their bills.

With his father dead in an automobile wreck, his mother married to another man, and his stepfather his bitter enemy, young Coogan goes into court to fight for the fortune—for which his parents sacrificed his childhood, even while he was in long dresses.

Started As Baby.

When Jackie was 18 months old his mother brought him to a studio seated him in a high chair in front of the glaring lights, and made him gurgle—then weep—for his first movie part. The picture was "Skinner's Baby," starring Bryant Washburn.

By the time he was 4 years old, his father was dancing in an act featuring Annette Kellerman. While she changed from one bathing suit to another, the elder Coogan hoofed in front of the drop.

One evening, in San Francisco, Annette called the child before the footlights, introduced him to the audience and asked him to perform. While the orchestra played, the yellow-haired child did his version of the shimmy dance, then the rage in America. The sight of the tiny child doing this dance greatly amused the folks who had paid their 40 cents for orchestra seats.

Jackie became a part of the act. A week later it was playing in Los Angeles. Charlie Chaplin was in the audience. He liked the appearance of the child, made a deal with the Coogans and put Jackie in the movies.

Won America as "The Kid."

Chaplin was working on a two-reeler, entitled "The Kid," in which Jackie appeared as his son. With his square-cut Bob, his big blue eyes which he could fill with tears at will, the boy was a real sensation. Chaplin expanded the picture to a six-reeler—and Jackie immediately won the hearts of the American movie fans.

Success of the picture ruined any chances Jackie may have had for a normal boyhood. He went into film after film. Maneuvered from studio to studio and exploited constantly as a child actor, he had no time for toys—except when posing for publicity pictures.

He couldn't play ball with the neighbors' children. He might fall, hurt himself and ruin a valuable movie property. Besides numerous comedy shorts, Jackie appeared for six years in such films as "Peck's Bad Boy," "My Boy," "Trouble," "Daddy," "Oliver Twist," "Circus Days," "Long Live the King," "Boy of Flanders," "The Rag Man,' "Old Clothes" and "Johnny Get Your Gun." As he grew older, Jackie's parents did their utmost to keep him looking like a little boy. He wore his hair bobbed so long that those few children he knew called him "sissy." Even when he was 9 he still wore velvet suits.

But at last senility got him—at the ripe old age of 10—and he retired from the screen, for his first chance at formal schooling. His income stopped, but the spending of the Coogans continued. Thus it was that after three years, Jackie had to go back to the cameras.

Belasco

The Belasco Theater relighted its portals yesterday afternoon—and they needed relighting, Easter Sunday having been as cloudy and somber as it was—with one of the more important of the year's foreign importations, "The Life and Loves of Beethoven."

The immortal composer, it seems, was not without his attachments. The picture now on the Belasco screen during the twilight hours presents the inspiration for some of Beethoven's most familiar works as a gay young woman bearing the rather formidable name of Juliette Guicciardi, impersonated by Jany Holt. I would not be too sure that Beethoven derived his inspiration for the "Moonlight Sonata" from this source. But he may have. Genius pursues strange courses.

The picture, at base, of course, is a tuneful biography of one of the world's great masters of music. Harry Baur portrays the character of the title with his customary heavy thoroughness. M. Baur is a fine actor, but one who is not addicted to the lighter forms of character delineation. He takes his role of Beethoven very seriously. Jany Holt, on the other hand, seems to be moved by the urge of a later and more flippant form of musical expression than was expressed in the compositions of the master who made her the subject of his reputed "Immortal Beloved" note.

There is the constant complaint voiced here that English subtitles only partially convey the full substance of lines that are spoken in French. That still is true of "The Life and Loves of Beethoven." It is a handicap that no foreign picture seems in any likelihood of ever overcoming.

Surrounding the star of the film are several adequate players who are not unknown to American audiences. Among them are Pauley, Debucourt—some of these mimes seem tremendously intrigued by the potency of a single name—Lucien Rozemberg, Yoland Lafon and Lucas Gridoux.

BELL.

OUT of that annual Paramount Sales Convention, held in the Shoreham Hotel over the week-end, has come the announcement that this time-honored producing company during the next year will release 58 full-length features and 102 short subjects.

It was the opinion of Neil F. Agnew, vice president in charge of distribution, who addressed the convention last week, that spirited romantic drama, played against colorful backgrounds, ranging from the aerial battlefields of present-day warfare to the mighty land combats of the days of King Arthur's Court, will dominate his company's output for the season of 1938-39.

Mr. Agnew should know. He flew to Washington directly from conferences with Adolph Zukor, veteran chairman of the board; William LeBaron, in charge of production and other officials of the company who are concerned at first hand with the manufacture of the celluloid in question.

In his speech to the assembled delegates, Mr. Agnew was emphatic in his optimism. He thinks the ensuing year is going to be one of artistic and box-office prosperity for the films—especially those built by Paramount. So there will be no curtailment of the company's policy in the matter of number or quality of pictures.

Among other things, Mr. Agnew said that "the success of 'Wells Fargo,' 'The Buccaneer' and other pictures of this type convinced us that audiences the world over want more swooping, spectacular pictures of the romantic, historical type and our production plans for the new season embrace several big pictures in this category."

To prove it, Mr. Agnew went on to name "Men With Wings," the American cavalcade of aviation, with Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland and Andy Devine in the principal roles. This will be directed by William Wellman, himself an aviator during the World War and the director of that earlier epic of the air made by Paramount, "Wings," which was presented for the first time on a Washington screen as the piece de resistance of the closing night of the sales convention held here in 1928.

He went on to cite Cecil B. De Mille's "Union Pacific," successor to "The Plainsman" and a sort of "hell-on-wheels" sequel to "The Iron Horse," in which will be visualized the conquering of an empire; "If I Were King," the Justin Huntley McCarthy swashbuckling love story in which Ronald Colman will be seen in the stellar role; "Knights of the Round Table" and "The Texans," an exciting panoramic study of the history of the Lone Star State.

Music will play an important part in the new Paramount pictures, and so will color. There is also an inclination to take advantage of the box-office value of current headlines in the newsprints. So there will be such films on the list as "Air Raid," "Cafe Society," "Navy Nurse," "Illegal Traffic," "King of Alcatraz," "Touchdown, Army," "Campus Confessions," and "Sons of the Legion."

If you must know about color, I can say with some authority, at the moment, that "Men With Wings" and "Tahiti"—pronounced Ty-tee—will both be Technicolor subjects.

The new year's activities of Paramount also will witness a continuation of the popular series pictures, among them the Hopalong Cassidys" and the "Bulldog Drummonds."

And let's not forget the short subjects. There will be 12 Popeyes, Sally Swing will supplant Betty Boop and there will be 13 Paramount Paragraphics, 12 Paramount Pictorials, 13 Grantland Rice Sportlights, 6 Color Classic Cartoons, 6 Popular Science releases, 6 Unusual Occupations, and 7 brilliant new short films to be known as "Paramount Color Cruises." In addition to all this, Max Fleischer has a new, two-reel Technicolor cartoon idea on the fire for which no title, as yet has been announced. In summation, I should say that 58 features and 102 short reels is a lot of camera grinding.

Manager "Bill" Collins, of the Gayety Theater, what with the visiting Easter crowds and all, decided, at the last minute, to bolster his current week's show a bit. So he added to the roster of principals the only 100 per cent Indian beauty known to the stage, Princess White Wing, and the "Fred Astaire of burlesk," Ned Walsch.

This practically makes the Gayety the National Capital's theater of all nations. We have had the Italian Corio, the Lithuanian Wausau, the German Charmaine, the Irish McCauley, the Chinese Fong and now comes the Indian princess.

No extra admission charge!

The postman continues to ring a few times a day—we have lost track of the number, and besides all that there is no bell and he doesn't ring. The fact nevertheless remains that in the past few days there have been extremely pleasant notes from Leonard B. Schloss, the panjandrum of Glen Echo Park; Rufus Blair, of the Paramount West Coast publicity department, who evidently had it in the back of his mind that this column wouldn't know about the Paramount Convention being held here, and one or two others—not omitting the fellow who resented our reference to "an Esquire misprint." He must have been atrociously dressed!

It has not been made generally known—indeed, it seems to have been kept a dire secret—that one of the important members of the cast of "Three Waltzes," the Shubert operetta opening in the National Theater tonight, is Freddy Sherman. Our old friend, Ben Atwell, should have opened up a bit on this one, for Freddy for season after season was one of the most talented and most popular juveniles ever to appear locally with Stephen E. Cochran's old National Players.

Mr. Sherman is a young man of the theater who knows his way around. He has done many fine things for the edification of resident theatergoers, not only "in stock," but also as a member of first-grade touring attractions—just as he will do this week in "Three Waltzes."

One wonders what was the matter with Mr. Atwell that he never mentioned it. But, even at that, nobody bats a thousand.

Statistics-Are-a-Pain-in-the-Neck Note.

Columbia

The stature that is being attained as an actress of the first rank by that prodigious youngster, Shirley Temple, perhaps is best exemplified by the standing of the adult players by whom she is being surrounded.

In "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," which opened a repeat engagement on the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater Friday, as the principal feature of the Easter bill, the "supporting cast" will be found to include Randolph Scott, Jack Haley, Gloria Stuart, Helen Westley, "Slim" Summerville, "Bill" Robinson, J. Edward Bromberg, Alan Dinehart, the Raymond Scott Quintet, Paul Hurst, William Demarest, Franklin Pangborn and a few dozen more.

It must be nice to be nine years old and have players like that doing "second business" for you!

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," of course, has been perked up a bit for its modern interpretation before the cameras, with Miss Temple in the stellar role. It has been brought up to date and considerably humorized. The story has an almost entirely "new slant," as you might say. Radio has been dragged into the thing and altogether it has been freshened almost beyond recognition.

Shirley Temple, as goes without saying, still is Shirley Temple. She seems a little older in her present role. That is natural. She is a little older. There seems to be no reason to suspect that this juvenile artiste will not go on forever. She has what it takes.

The major auxiliary of the Easter bill at the Columbia is "The Lone Ranger," a serial picture, that will keep the youth of the Capital interested for many weeks to come. It is "tops" in its field.

Count 'Em—50!

More than 50 players received speaking roles in "Having Wonderful Time." They portray all types of vacationists who hurry to the mountains regularly for a brief respite from workaday worries.

Indian Designs.

Rose Stradner is adapting the silverwork of the American Indian to her sports costumes and has just bought a silver-disc belt, handwrought with Indian symbols, to wear with sports costumes.

Metropolitan

"Jezebel," the picture that may or may not have been made with the idea of furnishing a challenge to the subsequent eminence of "Gone With the Wind"—when, as and if David O. Selznick ever films it—is on view again this week at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater, where it opened Friday as the Easter week attraction.

This is the subject in which Bette Davis contributes one of her most authentic impersonations to the screen. It is a slightly sultry role that Miss Davis plays. She is cast as a young aristocrat of the Old South in whom are imbedded few of the finer virtues. She is a bit on the side of a feminine devil. Her wiles are tossed about during the action to the acute discomfiture of practically all who come into association with her—particularly Henry Fonda, George Brent and Richard Cromwell. They are completely undone by the sinister machinations of this beautiful young hussy.

Mr. Brent even goes so far as to get himself killed in a duel with Mr. Cromwell as an evidence of the havoc Miss Davis, in her present incarnation, is able to precipitate. There is nothing very pleasant about "Jezebel" except the superb manner in which it is done. There is not a member of the cast, from Miss Davis down, who does not add to its fidelity and its dramatic strength. Spring Byington, Donald Crisp, Margaret Lindsay, Fay Bainter, Irving Pichel and many more are among those who add to the conviction of a play that is morbid in its every major manifestation, but gripping withal.

Over-Shoulder Bag.

Anita Louise, who recently completed work in "Marie Antoinette," carries an overshoulder bag, the long strap of which fits over the shoulder, allowing the purse to swing almost to hip-length for an easy hand grasp.

Picture Frame.

A political frame-up that results in an unforeseen killing and plenty of excitement in a small town features "This Marriage Business," new starring vehicle for Victor Moore.

The Screen Has These to Offer

EITHER HERE, OR SOON TO BE.

Trans-Lux

The Franco army smashes on to the sea coast in the greatest drive of the Spanish war, while Mrs. Roosevelt purchases her Easter finery in New York City. This is only a starter at the Trans-Lux Theater this week, with added attractions including that crazy loon, Lew Lehr, in an extraordinarily funny bit; racing shots from Bowie, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford observing their Golden Wedding anniversary.

Also in the news section of the bill we have the United States fleet maneuvering off Hawaii, Richard Whitney being taken to Sing Sing, a dog father being presented with sextuplets in a New York canine hospital, Norman Davis selected to head the American Red Cross, a new camera with a 50 mile range, Oxford defeating Cambridge in the greatest of all rowing classics and numerous other interesting "shots."

In the shorts of the bill, we have those darling Dionnes from Canada doing their stuff, everything from singing to ski-jumping and witnessing a "Mickey Mouse" cartoon, and what a benediction this is!

There is also a beautiful Technicolor short entitled "An Optical Poem" with the harmonious music of Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody. A truly lovely picture.

Hollywood

In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

HEDDA HOPPER.

Speaking of the circus, Bob Taplinger, who writes those swell bits you see in the papers for Warner Brothers, should be doing their dialogue, too. On passing the camels, he said, "And they ask us to try smoking one of those."

Coming out, he bought an armful of popcorn to feed Murphy, of the House of Murphy. You know that fascinating place where the host sings to drown the sound of soup. But Bob got mixed up with an elephant and the popcorn never reached Murphy.

If you can beg, borrow or steal him for an evening, never go to the circus without Mark Hellinger. What a man! What a memory! What a sense of humor! And how he can sing—off key! She's nice too—Mrs. Mary, silly. Another glamour girl gone domestic. She was Gladys Glad, of Ziegfeld Follies. And reluctantly goes out once a week in Hollywood.

Mrs. Joe Penner, certainly done up in blue foxes and such jewels! Big—my, my!

Gayety

Easter Sunday came to Washington and with it came one of the best all-around shows we've seen this season at the Gayety Theater. And by this we mean not only that the comedy was different, original and funny, but also that the leading women were unusually pretty, shapely and talented in their musical presentations.

Heading the comedy sector is Billy (Cheese and Crackers) Hagen, one of the most versatile comedians seen here in a long time, supported by his pal in laughs, Al Pharr. Between these two amusing lads the comedy sequences of the performance reach an entirely new high. Conny Ryon gives an unusually good performance in his "straight man" role and lends one of the best voices heard in some time to the popular musical numbers that abound throughout the production. Incidentally, Jess Mack, one of burlesque's better character actors, is present, and offers a bit of real acting, now and again, to give the show an added "lift."

The beauties who head the feminine parade never have been seen to better advantage. Heading this galaxy are Joan Mavis and Jean Carter, two beauties who have "plenty on the ball."

Nats Will Send Wes Ferrell Against A's Today

Sports — The Washington Post — Sports

X* WASHINGTON: MONDAY, APRIL 18, 1938 15

The Day: Today . . . The Time: 3 P.M. . . . The Place: Griffith Stadium . . . The Reason: The Opening Game

This Morning

Busy Summer Looms for Bucky Harris.

By Shirley Povich.

This may not be the best season Stanley Raymond Harris has experienced as manager of the Washington Club but it certainly looms as the busiest. His job this year is no sinecure, although the pay is good and you can't beat the hours.

POVICH.

The Nats' manager has reason to envy fellows like Joe McCarthy, Mickey Cochrane and Jimmy Dykes. They can simply hand their line-ups to the umpires at the start of the season and let it go at that, except for the daily change in pitchers. But Harris, from day to day must shift, juggle and experiment. He must blend two squads into one.

On the day a left-hander pitches against the Nats, Harris will be strongly tempted to bench Buddy Myer, Mel Almada and perhaps Goose Goslin and Johnny Stone. On the day a right-hander opposes the Nats, the Washington manager must debate with himself the expediency of benching Al Simmons, Ossie Bluege and George Case.

To maneuver thusly, Harris will need all of his tact. The benching of veterans who are accustomed to playing every day is always ticklish business. They don't like it, because it implies strongly that they're slipping. It is Harris' job to bench 'em and make 'em like it, at least to the degree that there will be no dissension on the club.

It is fortunate for Harris, thus, that he has the happy faculty of maintaining discipline without using the mailed fist. It will require more maneuvering on his part, but the record of the Nats' manager is in his favor. It is a byword among players in the league that they like to play for Bucky Harris.

Despite this good fellowship, however, Harris regards baseball as strictly business, this year, particularly. He is operating on a one-year contract, and he knows that Clark Griffith expects much from his 1938 team despite the general disposition to rate the club sixth. Anything less than a first division berth at the end of the season will find the Nats' owner vastly disappointed. Harris has his job to protect.

No manager in the league has a more hodge-podge pitching staff than Harris. If he doesn't choose his pitchers carefully, he is lost. Gone are the days of 1924-25 when Harris could simply put a ball in the hand of Walter Johnson or Tom Zachary or George Mogridge or Stanley Coveleskie or Dutch Ruether and say "go out there and win."

When he gets past Wes Ferrell on his current Washington team, Harris will be in something of a dilemma. If Mont Weaver, perchance, should fail him, then his pitching woes will be that much worse. Pete Appleton has been an in-and-outer, Jimmy DeShong does not appear ready; Elon Hogsett figures to win only against certain clubs, and Harris' rookie hurlers are a distinct gamble.

And he has too many outfielders for any peace of mind. The reason the Nats are carrying seven outfielders—Stone, Almada, Case, Simmons, Goslin, Wright and Wasdell—is plain: Harris doesn't trust any particular three to carry the load. Out of the lot he hopes to maintain some kind of a consistent-hitting, capable fielding trio, but he'll have to manipulate.

And unless he uses all of the tact or diplomacy at his command, Harris is apt to be very unpopular with certain individuals on the club who do not like to be benched. The Nats' manager has that to consider. To keep them in line will be a task itself. It looms as a very busy summer for Bucky Harris.

Today the season starts, too, for the baseball writers who traipse around the country with the big league clubs. The profession was in disrepute after the Bill Terry blast in the Saturday Evening Post, but there are some good guys in it. Honest.

Three of these good guys were covering a pal in the South a couple of springs ago during a period when the pal was experimenting a bit. He was seeking to learn whether the Southern distilleries could manufacture whisky as fast as he could drink it and carried his investigation to some lengths.

Imitating their pal's writing style, his three friends representing other papers filed articles for him daily under his own name. They were getting away with it beautifully, they thought. Then came the wire from the fellow's boss:

"Joe Doakes, Evening Blade Correspondent, Biloxi, Miss. stop. Please tell whoever is doing your stuff for you to hold pre-game leads to 150 words."

Legion Will Have Ten.

The Sons of the American Legion are planning to have a softball league, headed by Morris Friedberg. The first game is slated to open May 7. S. A. L. week. All squadrons who are interested in having a team in the league please get in touch with Morris Friedberg, 1451 Park road northwest, or phone Columbia 9283-W.

Dizzy Pays Cub Bosses A Fast Visit

Dean Realizes One of Ambitions—Pitching for Cubs.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 17.—The Chicago Cubs' prize-pitching acquisition, Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, breezed into the city and out again today in almost the same time it takes his "fast one" to hop across the plate.

The pennant-conscious Cubs, whose title stock skyrocketed with yesterday's deal that sent three players and a cash sum reported today at $150,000 to the St. Louis Cards, were set to welcome Diz with open arms.

However, the Great One, expected late today, showed up early this morning, met Cub officials in a quick conference and sped back to St. Louis before noon.

He will leave there tonight, and is expected to arrive in Cincinnati in time tomorrow for a workout with his new club. Indications were he would pitch the third game against the Reds Thursday.

Dean met today with Charles A. Weber, vice president of the club, and Manager Charley Grimm. Owner P. K. Wrigley, who completed yesterday's transaction that sent Pitchers Curt Davis and Clyde Shoun, Outfielder Tuck Stainback and cash to the Cards in return for Dean, was not on hand. He left for California yesterday immediately after completion of the deal.

Weber and Grimm appeared well pleased over today's conference, termed merely a "get together" by Weber. The 27-year-old Dizzy was as happy as a youngster.

"It always has been my ambition to play with the Cubs," Diz said between poses for photographers and asking how much time he had to make his train. "The deal came as a surprise and I haven't quite got over it yet. But I'm tickled to be here and to be playing under Grimm."

There was no bluster about the much publicized talkative one. He was all smiles. He said his arm was all right and he was ready for work.

At this, Grimm took him at his word and announced his new hurler probably would be on the firing line against Cincinnati Thursday. He said Clay Bryant definitely would be the opening day pitcher and Tex Carleton would follow on Wednesday. This arrangement means Dean will not work in the Cubs home opening series against his former Gas House gang, unless it is in a relief role, Grimm added.

Asked about Pepper Martin's remark yesterday in which he said "I'll bet they (the Cardinals) use some of that dough to get Mungo" (Van Lingle Mungo, of Brooklyn), Dizzy said as he raced for a cab, "I don't think they got enough." But the reported cash sum of $150,000 today still stood.

Cubs Failed to Land Mungo

St. Louis, April 17 (AP).—The Globe-Democrat will say tomorrow the St. Louis Cardinals followed their Dizzy Dean trade Saturday with an immediate but unsuccessful attempt to buy Van Lingle Mungo, Brooklyn fireball pitcher, from the Dodgers.

Mamakos-Ciaccio Bout Tonight Promises to Be Regular Brawl

By Lewis F. Atchison.

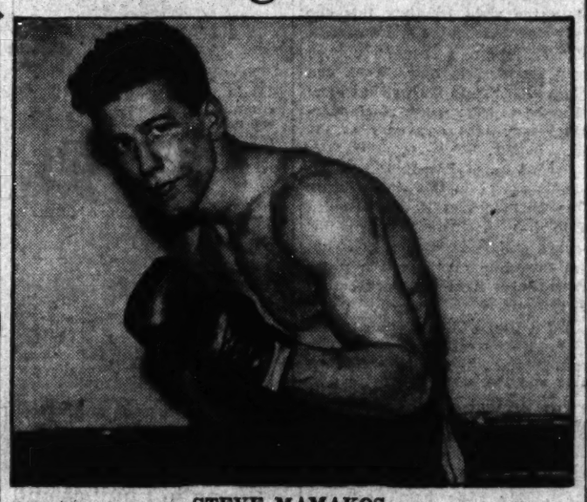
A couple of ambitious, tough and willing preliminary boys bask and battle in the warm glow of the spotlight at Turner's Arena, where Steve Mamakos, District welterweight, and Tony Ciaccio meet in an eight-round feature bout.

Defeated by George Abrams in his initial appearance here two months ago because of a consistent fouling, Ciaccio is substituting for Ivan Nedomatsky, who was granted a postponement because of an injured thumb. He took the bout on short notice, but still figures to give the Golden Greek a busy evening.

Ciaccio's lack of formal training for the engagement may offset, to some extent, Mamakos' inexperience. The energetic Italian's performance against Abrams was sufficient evidence of his durability and aggressiveness. He starts throwing punches with the first bell, usually concentrating on the body, and finishes at the same, brisk pace. He doesn't punch hard enough, however, to knock Mamakos down, much less out.

In the Greek he meets a lad with similar doggedness, and, perhaps, better staying qualities. Mamakos is honed to a fine edge after training diligently for his long-awaited bout with Nedomatsky, and will be ready to go 8, 18 or 28 rounds. He'll stalk Ciaccio like a shadow, trading two punches for one—taking everything the Italian has and giving his best in return. It will be a genuine, old-fashioned brawl.

If Ciaccio elects to box the Washington welter, however, it may be a different story for Steve is short on ring generalship. "Toots" Bernstein left him boxing the ringposts a couple of times during their bout, and Abrams left-handed him to sheds. Mamakos wades in head-on, both hands banging away at the opposition, and if Ciaccio tries to bully him with the same tactics, it's going to be a sorry evening for the visitor. Even should he decide to box, Ciaccio will have his hands full, for Mamakos goes at top speed every minute—even when hurt.



STEVE MAMAKOS.

Howard Scott returns to the local battle-pit after a prolonged absence to meet Johnny Murray, of New York, in an eight-round co-feature. Murray, a fair to middling club fighter, does not figure to give the veteran undue trouble, but there's still room for an upset. Scott is still District lightweight champion, and is looking for a good opponent to put it up against this summer—preferably Lou Gevinson.

Al Rowan battles Joe Temes in a six-rounder that marks the return of Temes to Washington. The Greek battler lost a 10-round decision to Gevinson when the southpaw was just starting out, and was knocked out in the seventh round of a return battle.

Apostoli's Pilot Predicts Title

Hot Springs, Ark., April 17 (U.P.).—Larry White, manager of Fred Apostoli, today predicted the San Francisco middleweight would win the title from Freddie Steele.

"Fans remember the neat job Apostoli did in pinning Steel's ears back in their nontitle bout, and he can repeat in a fight for the crown," White said.

Orioles Hit Chase, Beat Nats, 8 to 2

Harry Matuzak Limits Nats to Six Hits; Chase Homers.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Md., April 17.—On the sour note of an 8-to-2 beating by the Baltimore Orioles, the Nats ended their preseason campaign here today.

They were licked by an undersized right-hander named Harry Matuzak, who used to pitch for the Philadelphia Athletics. Little Mr. Matuzak held the Washington athletes to six hits, which is something of a feat in this pitch-and-out park of the Orioeles, where the right-fielder can shake hands with the first baseman with a bit of a stretch.

Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats saw nothing today in the pitching of Ken Chase that inspired any handsprings of delight. The young Washington southpaw was swatted for 11 hits in the seven innings he pitched, yielded all of the Oriole's runs and tossed three very wild pitches into the proceedings.

Wasdell Homers.

The lone bright spot of the afternoon, from a Washington viewpoint, was provided by James Charles Wasdell, who came off the bench in the eighth inning to pinch-hit for Chase, and smote one of Matuzak's pitches for a home run. It was no ordinary home run. It was one of the longest home runs ever hit in Baltimore. It was still on the ascent as it cleared the right-center fence and eventually dropped across the street on the rooftops, where only the man-sized wallops land.

For three innings, Chase was turning in a thoroughly acceptable job. And then the Orioles began to get restless under the spell of their inactivity. They started a two-run fuss in the fourth inning, stirred up three runs in the fifth, picked up another in the sixth, and took a parting shot at Chase in the form of two runs in the seventh.

Up Lead to 5-1.

The rookie southpaw had a 1-0 lead going into the fourth, and had allowed only two hits. But the Orioles beat out a pair of infield hits that apparently unsteadied Chase, because he inserted one of his three wild pitches at this point. A single off the bat of Norris, put the Orioles in front, 2-1.

They rapped him for three hits in the fifth, a two-bagger by Tauby doing most of the damage, but another wild pitch by Chase which hit the dirt in front of the plate didn't hurt the Orioles any as they upped their lead to 5-1.

It has been the acquisition of the large Italian fellow which has given Washington fans reason to hope that the Nats will be a factor in this year's pennant proceedings and they have been captivated by the tales of Bonura's slugging habits. They want to see him up there swinging his big bat with Washington runners on the bases.

There never has been much doubt that Washington would be the favorite to win this opening game. The Philadelphia team that the venerable Connie Mack will send onto the field is sprinkled generously with unproved rookies at first base, at second base, at shortstop and on the pitching mound.

Manager Bucky Harris made it known long ago that the temperamental Ferrell, workhorse of the Nats' staff, would be his opening-game pitcher. Others on the Washington staff may have shaded Ferrell with their spring performances, but the tall right-hander still ranks as Harris' most dependable hurler.

A Veteran Opener.

Pitching opening games has come to be something of a custom with Ferrell anyway. Six opening-game assignments have fallen to Ferrell during his major league career and five times he has won his game. Today he will be pitching into the mitt of his older but smaller brother Rick. The Ferrell freres comprise the only brother battery in the big leagues.

One can only speculate on the identity of the chap Mr. Mack will send to the mound. The A's manager is hewing to custom and refusing to divulge the name of his pitcher until 15 minutes before game time when his choice will go to the sidelines to warm up for the task.

The suspicion was that Mack, like every other manager in the league, would reserve his left-handers to shoot at the Nats, whose batting order is topheavy with southpaw hitters, but it now appears that a right-hander will take the mound for the Athletics today.

Edgar Smith, the No. 1 left hander of Mack's staff, apparently will not get the assignment for Smith has been used in two exhibition games over the week-end.

New First Sacker.

The chief probability is that Mack will start the right-handed Luther Thomas, the Virginia boy who was cast off by the Nats several years ago, or the equally right-handed, Harry Kelley, veteran rookie from Atlanta who was a sensation with the Athletics two seasons ago.

Mack will introduce a new first baseman in Gene Hasson, who came up from Williamsport to play 29 games with the Athletics last season, and he will present a rookie at second in Dario Lodigiani. With Skeeter Newsome, regular shortstop, still suffering the effects of a bean ball, he must entrust the shortstop duties to still another rookie, Russ Peters.

At third base will be a familiar figure in Bill Werber, the Washington boy who made good with the Red Sox before he was traded to the A's, and in the outfield Mack will present two veterans in Wally Moses and Bob Johnson, with Rookie Herbert Barna, who will replace "Mule" Haas.

Manager Bucky Harris, strongly fortified with his veteran infield of Bonura at first, Buddy Myer at second, Buddy Lewis at third and Cecil Travis at shortstop, will start the season-long juggling of his outfield today.

But in at least one outfield post will be the newly adopted hero of Washington fans—chunky Taft Wright, the ugly duckling of Orlando, who blossomed en route North as the most feared slugger on the club aside from Bonura.

Wright rocketed into a regular outfield job with the Nats to take a place alongside Johnny Stone, but Harris' third outfielder may be any one of a trio—Goose Goslin, Al Simmons and Mel Almada.

The Nats' manager has not been thrilled by the recent hitting attempts of Almada, the regular center fielder of last season, but on the theory that when the chips are down the little Mexican again will display the talents he showed last year, Harris may insert him in centerfield today.

With young George Case on the sidelines with an injured shoulder, Harris shudders at the thought of Almada's absence from centerfield, where his ground-roaming ability is indispensable to the Nats.

McCluskey, Lash To Meet in Race At Penn Relays

Philadelphia, April 17 (AP).—Joseph P. McCluskey, former Fordham star and national 3,000-meter indoor steeplechase champion, will be one of the opponents of Don Lash, Indiana 2-miler, in the 3,000-meter special race at the forty-fourth annual University of Pennsylvania relay carnival April 29 and 30, university officials announced today.

Two other runners will be selected this week to compete with Lash and McClusky in the race, scheduled for Saturday, April 30.

The 3,000-meter race is one of four special events on the carnival program. Ten outstanding hurdlers will compete in a 120-yard high-hurdle event Friday, while 12 sprinters will participate in a 100-yard dash and Glenn Cunningham will oppose Gene Venzke and two others in a mile race Saturday in addition to the Lash-McClusky duel.

The first dead heat in Kentucky Derby history will be registered at Churchill Downs on May 7 with Stagehand and Fighting Fox finishing even-Stephen if they run true to the consensus of an Atlantic seaboard vote in which more than 100 sports writers participated. Stagehand and Fighting Fox received exactly the same number of first-place nominations by the writers who balloted for the purpose of taking a shot at a $10 hat awarded by the hat manufacturers of Danbury, Conn.

HAIGHT.

The headpieces will go to the 50 writers who come closest to calling the finish of the Blue Grass classic on a 1-2-3-4-5 basis.

That the writers are sweet on the chances of this pair was brought out by the fact that all but three placed Stagehand in the pay-off and all but four predicted that Fighting Fox would be among the first three to reach the wire.

Strangely enough, not one of the so-called experts named Menow, champion juvenile of 1937, to win the Derby, but all except six placed him among the first five.

One of the peculiar facts developed by the balloting was that the gentlemen of the press had very definite but conflicting ideas concerning the ability of Nedayr, the colt that gained prestige by his Maryland victories last fall. Practically all those who named the W. S. Kilmer colt put him in first position. For the most part, the others ignored his existence in the race.

* * * *

Lawrin, the Florida speed train, received only three votes for winning position, but most of the scribes believed that he would be among the first five to reach the imaginary wire. Tiger was handled along the same lines as Nedayr. He received more first selections than he did for other positions. The opinion seems to be that if Tiger does not get to the front and stay there he will drop far out of it in the late stages.

Despite the fact that Sun Egret had won two Bowie stakes before the balloting closed on April 11, the A. C. Compton colt did not receive a single vote for first money at Louisville. However, five scribes placed him second, and the Bedwell-trained flash was well represented in third, fourth and fifth places.

Dauber, the Foxcatcher Farms' colt now at Havre de Grace, received two votes for first money and several for other positions. The balloting gives the impression that the slow-beginning but fast-closing horse will be along in the stretch in time to get a place in the money picture.

3 Menow	7 Sun Egret
4 Nedayr	8 Dauber
5 Lawrin	9 Mountain Ridge
6 Tiger	10 Wise Fox

I'm not going to let you in on the way I picked them. I don't want to be accused of second thinking when I get out on the limb later. However, if my final Derby selections don't come up to snuff and you see me wearing a new hat—well, draw your own conclusions.

Terps Meet Hoyas' Nine On Saturday

By Jack Munhall.

The long-awaited baseball meeting of Georgetown and Maryland Saturday in the feature attraction of Maryland's twenty-first annual spring field day headlines a rather meager collegiate sports card this week.

Sharing interest with the diamond maneuvers of these old local rivals will be the traditional Maryland-St. John's lacrosse match and a tennis match with William and Mary.

Outside of this double attraction at College Park, only one other major game is listed. That will involve Georgetown and Penn State in baseball Friday on the Hoya field.

The Hoya-Terp ball game will bring together two exceptionally fine teams, one undefeated, the other beaten only once in six starts. Georgetown, although fortunate in nosing out Michigan, 9-7, Thursday, boasts a perfect slate, with victories over Vermont as well as the Wolverines.

Terps Strike Snag.

Maryland was bowling along at a promising clip until an aroused Michigan team swatted four Terp pitchers for 17 hits and a 16-6 triumph Friday. That debacle, however, is not a true gauge of Maryland's ability and should not be regarded as such. Discarding that game, Maryland and Georgetown shape up fairly even, with an edge to the Hoyas, perhaps.

Using Vermont and Michigan, common foes, as a basis of comparison, Georgetown would appear much the superior team. For Joe Judge's lads defeated Michigan, 9-7, as stated above, while Maryland's efforts netted a sound trouncing. Maryland beat Vermont, 16-4, and Georgetown licked the Cats, 10-1.

All of which argues that both Georgetown and Maryland have powerful attacks, but uncertain pitching. Also that the one which happens to be slugglug on Saturday will emerge the victor.

Granting that hitting will decide the game, the persent Southern trip of Maryland undoubtedly will have a great deal to do with what happens Saturday. Without Charley Weidinger, its ace pitcher, Maryland defeated Virginia yesterday and is down for a doubleheader with Duke today and a single contest with William and Mary Tuesday.

Weidinger Will Get Rest.

What effect the gruelling series will have on Maryland's none too potent pitching staff is problematical. But it certainly will not leave the Terp moundsmen fresh for the crucial Georgetown engagement. One thing, however, may change the outlook—the rest that Weidinger will receive, due to his inactivity.

With the chunky but temperamental right-hander in form, the Terps would be at least an even choice to beat either Mike Petroskey or Hank Bertrand, Georgetown's two leading hurlers. Petrosky, who probably will be nominated for the starting assignment, has little more than a fast ball, which may not get him by Maryland's hard-hitting crew of Bill Bryant, Mike Surgent, Eddie Johnson and Waverly Wheeler.

And the same applies to Maryland's pitchers and the dangerous Hoya batters. In Smitty Nau, Tony Barabas, Capt. John Cavadine, Harry Cavadine, Harry Bassin and Joe Keegin, Georgetown has five players who are the peers of any Maryland can name.

The Maryland-St. John's lacrosse match, coming at this time, is important to the Terps. Aiming at another national championship, Jack Faber's boys have lost only to Mount Washington this season and a victory over the Johnnies would add considerable prestige.

ing opponent, Matuzak, and Geary's double and Tauby's fly brought the pitcher home. In the seventh, after he walked Pussinelli, Chase tossed another of his wild pitches and Weintraub and Wright rapped out hits that gave the Orioles two more runs.

Joe Krakauskas faced the Orioles in the eighth and compared to Chase he was a star. He struck out one, walked one, allowed no hits and no runs.

The Nats two runs can be described very briefly. They picked up one in the fourth when Taft Wright (that man again) doubled to center and Johnny Stone banged a double against the same fence. In the eighth, Jimmy Wasdell batted for Chase and hit that home run we were telling you about.

At The Post . . .

Dear Al: Selections at Havre de Grace.

The best ride I saw at The Graw Saturday was not on a winner. It was Kenneth McCombs' efforts on the back of Sun Mica, a horse which lost a photograph decision to Kievson. Sun Mica set most of the pace but appeared to be tossing in the sponge when Kievson, the favorite, with Jockey Al Shelhamer up, moved up beside him entering the stretch. Sun Mica might have had some ideas about quitting, but not McCombs. The little fellow went to work on his mount with a will. He plied the whip and he hustled and scuffled like mad. Midway of the stretch, Sun Mica was almost a half-length behind Kievson but the horse must have been convinced that McCombs meant business for he picked up speed again and it was only by the narrowest of margins that he surrendered to the favorite. If I have any Paul Revere riding to do, I'm going to hire McCombs. And another thing, McCombs came close to taking the Harford Handicap with Grand Slam. The one-time Derby hope sulked and was next to last at the final turn. From there to the wire, he put Grand Slam to pressure and the horse was going to take it all in another 10 yards. McCombs scored his only victory of the day on Crepe, but it did not take any special talent to turn the trick, for the son of Omar Khayyam was much the best in his field. Grape Thief wasn't anywhere as good as the John Hay Whitney handlers once believed. They admitted that by putting him in a claiming race on the week-end program and, as had been expected, the colt was taken to a new barn. The writers who wintered in Florida are strong for Lawrin in the Kentucky Derby.

BILL.

First Race—War Moon has an education edge on this field composed mostly of first time starters. With the right handling this one may emerge from the maiden ranks. Vanderbilt forced send an untried pair postward in Star Struck and Flying Car. Both are well bred and reported to have speed. Macie Margaret may take a gander at the show money.

Second Race.—Fast Express seems ideally placed in this cheap sprint. Ran fair races at Bowie. Golden Vein has shown good form this spring. May be tailing off but I'm forced to give him the place. Patchpocket likes the track and is dangerous.

Third Race—Little Tramp turned in a bang-up second in the last at the other course. Has plenty of closing ability and seems best of the group. Sought After would be a threat if sent back. Vestale likes the route and should be prominent.

Fourth Race—Postage Due, a star at Bowie, should add another purse in this field. Appears capable of handling the 122-pound assignment. My Elsie hasn't collected her purse as yet in this State. She gets in light and may be the one to beat. Sachem won at the other course but seems to have too much of a load.

Fifth Race—Parmelett T. has one Maryland race to his credit that would make him win a race of this sort. I'm going to string along with him. Yellow Tulip is reported to be fit and is dangerous. Sun Power to complete the money bracket.

Sixth Race—Hit and Run gets some weight off by taking an apprentice rider. This one has worked well since that recent good effort and probably will visit the winner's circle. Mariate did well here the other day and should be close. Justa Gal, definitely improved this spring, should take a piece of the purse.

Seventh Race—Chief Evergreen was getting the feel of the track in that outing last week. This one may surprise this gang. Ladino is good now and figures on cold dope. Inflees to take care of the others.

Cubs Now Rated Flag Favorites

New York, April 17 (AP).—Jack Doyle, the Broadway betting commissioner whose prices on the major league pennant races are regarded as "official" made the Chicago Cubs favorites to win the National League title today because of their acquisition of Dizzy Dean.

Doyle quoted the odds as 3 to 2 against the Cubs winning as compared to his previous second-choice figure of 2 to 1. The New York Giants remained at 8 to 5, but dropped to second rating.

Odds against the Cardinals increased from 3 to 1 to 4 to 1 with the loss of Dean while the Pittsburgh Pirates changed from 6 to 1 to 5 to 1. The odds on the other major league clubs remained unchanged.

Two Sandlot Leagues Form in Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., April 17.—Two of the section's four sandlot baseball leagues completed reorganization yesterday and both expanded from six clubs last season to eight.

The Tri-County League will open its campaign Sunday, May 1, with Eckhart, Club Recreation, Grantsville, Barrelville, Cumberland Knights of Pythias, Cumberland Exports, Flintstone and Wellersburg. The latter four clubs are holdovers.

Busy Week Carded for High Teams

By Perry Wilkinson.

Even though the Easter holidays have called to a halt the Inter-High series, to be resumed on April 26 when Roosevelt entertains Central in its own ball yard, an inoperative sports week is by no means in store for high school athletes of the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Followers of scholastic activities will have an opportunity to witness 14 baseball games, 6 tennis matches and a dual track meet to be staged on fields and courts of Washington and vicinity. In most cases, all teams participating seem to be avoiding play with schools of its own league or locality.

All local teams except Western, Woodrow Wilson and Roosevelt, are scheduled to see action with out-of-town teams in an attempt to keep "warm" for what appears to be a close race for the Inter-High crown. Wednesday and Friday will be the two busiest days.

One Game Today.

Washington-Lee, which has one of its strongest teams, as shown by its 10-7 win over Eastern, is the only team playing today. The Arlingtonians entertain South River High, a New Jersey aggregation that soundly trounced Montgomery Blair, 20-3, on the latter's home field last Thursday.

On Tuesday, Anacostia High School, which lost to Wilson, 7-4, in the series opener, will be endeavoring to crash the win column behind the industrious Arthur Faircloth. Indian ace pitcher, when they meet Bethesda-Chevy Chase on the Garrett Park diamond at 3:15 p. m. Central travels to Norfolk to play the Naval Training Station nine, while in tennis St. Albans will be playing host to Tech at 3:15 o'clock.

Five baseball games and three tennis matches are on tap Wednesday. Eastern, defending Inter-High champions and still the team to beat, as illustrated by its 15-0 victory over Roosevelt, will head for Alexandria to tackle Episcopal at 3:15 p. m. Central prolongs its stay in Norfolk for the purpose of defeating Maury High, Washington-Lee engages Blair at Arlington, Mount Rainier entertains Maryland Park and St. Albans meets George Washington High at Alexandria.

Day's Tennis Matches.

The tennis matches of the same day find Roosevelt at Western settling the issue at Rock Creek Park, Langdon Prep meeting Friends on the latter's court, and Eastern High's racquet wielders playing St. Albans on the St. Alban courts. All games are scheduled for 3:15 o'clock.

Only one event is carded for Thursday. Bethesda-Chevy Chase, which defeated Gaithersburg in its first game, 9-8, is hoping to make it two in a row when they play host to Landon Prep's nine.

A dual track meet between Eastern and Episcopal, to be staged at Alexandria, will head Friday's program. In tennis, Central plays the George Washington Freshmen on the Potomac courts, while in baseball, Washington-Lee will be entertained at Fredericksburg, Blair will be host to Mount Rainier and Rockville will be attempting to make Betheda feel right at home. Game time is 3:15 p. m.

On Saturday Tech's nine will visit Episcopal, with proceedings getting under way at 2:30 o'clock, while at the same time, St. Albans engages Woodberry Forest on the former's field. Episcopal and Hill will square off in tennis at 3 o'clock in Alexandria.

Wilkes-Barre Wins Over Frederick

Frederick, Md., April 17.—Scoring four runs in the fourth on three doubles, a walk and an error, the Wilkes-Barre Barons of the Eastern League defeated the Frederick Hustlers today, 6-0. Three Wilkes-Barre hurlers limited the locals to two hits, both of which were made by Frank James. Fielding plays by O'Flaherty, Legore and Hoffman featured.

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

New York, April 17.—Increasing skepticism as to the champion Yankees' ability to win their third straight pennant features baseball sentiment on the eve of the season's opening.

CUDDY.

True, most of the writers and managers have picked them to turn the trick. But there is none of the unified and cock-sure confidence among fans and baseball people that supported the Yanks on the eve of last season's opening.

I believe these growing doubts are silly, but still I am glad to note them. They should stimulate fan interest in the American League race and perhaps also give Marse Joe McCarthy's Bronx Bombers a shot in the arm.

The skeptics recall that the law of averages is heavily against any club maintaining a championship stride for three straight seasons. They point to the Yanks' comparatively poor showing during the training season when they lost the St. Petersburg City series for the first time since the Yanks have been training in that city. The St. Louis Cardinals, a fourth-place National League outfit, beat them in the series. Before coming to New York to wind up their exhibition tour against Brooklyn, the Yanks won 18 and lost 10 games. But they only broke even with major league clubs, winning six and losing six. And against the Dodgers in three games at Ebbets Field, the Yanks appeared uncertain, indeed.

Manager McCarthy admits, "after a team has won two successive world championships, its most formidable enemy is itself." He means that it is difficult for a club to keep its fighting edge after the gold and glory that comes from two world titles. However, he emphasizes, "I am sure we are not going to be beaten that way. This club is not letting up. Our men are not that type. We have no weak-minded athletes."

I agree with Marse Joe on this subject. There are one or two play boys on the Yankee roster—fellows who might not be able to stand prosperity. But most of the others are level-headed chaps for whom the game is serious business. Take their star performer, for example, Joe DiMaggio does not feel at all rich after two World Series melons. The Frisco kid is putting up a grand battle to get more money than offered by the Yanks. He's the outstanding holdout of the year. He's after dough, like most of his mates. They're real money players.

* * * *

I asked McCarthy, before the Yanks entrained for Boston, how he rated his '38 club as compared to the champions of '37 and '36.

"I won't be able to answer that for sure until we've played all the other clubs, so I won't make any guesses now," Joe said. "But I can say that we're stronger defensively now than during the past two seasons. I think our pitching is better. As yet, I can't note any decrease in power."

* * * *

Again I'm confident that Marse Joe is correct. You see, this '38 band of Yanks is not an outfit that was suddenly upholstered. It's a team that McCarthy, Business Manager Ed Barrow and Owner Jacob Ruppert have been planning for some time. Two winters ago McCarthy foresaw the quick fadeout of Tony Lazzeri at second base. Accordingly, Joe Gordon, who had been a shortstop in his early career, was ordered to shift to the second sack at Newark to prepare for the job that he is starting tomorrow with the Yanks.

McCarthy also anticipated problems in the outfield, so he urged Ruppert to outbid other clubs when Tommy Henrich was declared a free agent last April. Many people regard the Yanks as an "old" club, but actually there is an excellent balance of youngsters and veterans in the lineup. Three of the eight regulars are less than 24—DiMaggio, when he signs; Gordon and Henrich. McCarthy expects his pitching staff to be bolstered by Spurgeon Chandler, Lee Stine and Joe Beggs, although it still is based on Gomez, Ruffing, Murphy and Pearson.

McCarthy figures this pitching stronger than in '37. That is important because the Yanks led the American circuit in pitching last season. Most folks regard them as a power club that wrecks opposing flingers and blasts out enough runs to cover up its own mound weaknesses. Such is not the case. Last season, the Yankee hurlers limited the enemy to an average of 3.65 earned runs per game.

Some skeptics doubt that First Baseman Lou Gehrig can continue his "iron horse" performance. He is 35. He has played 1,965 consecutive major league games. But he is a clean-living serious-minded fellow who looks now as if he might have two or three more good seasons in his armor-plated body.

No, my friends, don't sell these Yankees short—as they start the '38 race. They're world champions tonight. And I'm confident they have the ability and spirit to be world champions after the World Series of '38, regardless of their National League opponent in that series.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Claggett Stevens, former assistant professional at three local clubs, arrived at his home in Rockville yesterday after resigning his post as pro at the Ponte Vedra Club in Florida, and immediately became the favorite to succeed Wiffy Cox at Kenwood.

Stevens had been pro at the Jacksonville Beach club for the past two years, after working at Manor, Bannockburn and Congressional here. His resignation at Ponte Vedra for personal reasons was effective nearly two weeks ago.

Stevens was prominently mentioned as the new pro at Kenwood when Cox was suddenly secured for the position nearly three years ago. In fact, he was virtually "in," according to the reports.

To Stay in Town.

He applied for the post immediately after learning of Cox's appointment at Congressional last week. Whether or not he is successful in gaining the berth at Kenwood, he will continue to live in town with his family. Clagett is a brother of Eddie Stevens, Al Treder's assistant at Manor.

The 29-year-old linksman first worked under Treder at Manor. He went to Capitol, then Bannockburn, worked under Tony Sylvester, and then moved to Congressional where he served as assistant to Sandy Armour and MacKenzie. He alternated at Congressional and Ponte Vedra for a year before taking the Florida job as head mentor.

The Kenwood committee will take no action until Tuesday night. Another applicant yesterday was Glenn Spencer, brother of Cliff and former Maryland Country Club mentor. Club sentiment also is in favor of securing Al Jamison from Indian Spring. Several other well-known local pros have submitted applications, in addition to George Diffenbaugh and Roger Peacock, who were favored before Stevens' bid.

BEAVER DAM.

Martin E. McCarthy and six other Beaver Dam linksmen tied with net 73's in the blind bogey event at the Landover course yesterday. McCarthy had the lowest round, 78-5—73.

Other scores were W. A. Parks, 83-10—73; J. W. Tallentire, 99-26—73; R. Wynkoop, 93-20—73; S. Rubenstein, 94-21—73; N. J. Wilson, 85-12—73, and W. C. Hackman, 93-20—73.

INDIAN SPRING.

Arthur Urban won a lion's share of the honors in the Most Threes, Fours and Fives Tournament at Indian Spring yesterday, tying with W. R. Stone, with three treys, and with Lou Harrison, with 11 fours. R. E. Hicks won the most fives award with 13.

ARGYLE.

A. E. Willmett's net 74 was the first number drawn in the spring handicap tournament at Argyle yesterday, with Ed Mohler and Bob Stearns tying for second at 75. Willmett had 84-10—74; Mohler, 89-14—75, and Stearns, 90-15—75.

Four other prize winners were deadlocked with 78. E. L. Myers, 92-14—78; J. W. Hutchison, 94-16—78; W. T. Allen, 93-15—78, and N. R. Gibson, 88-10—78.

ARM AND NAVY.

Dr. Yando G. Hartman and Maj. Middleswatz had the lucky numbers in the Service Club handicap event yesterday, tying with net 77's. Other winners were Dr. L. K. MacClutchie, R. C. Jones, E. T. King, W. F. Doyle, and C. W. Dunning.

Professional Alan Burton came within a shot of equaling the lowest score turned in over the new Army and Navy layout yesterday, scoring a 74. He was out in 34, 1 under par, but required 40 strokes on the back 9, including a penalty stroke on the tenth hole. He was playing with Capt. Rogers and Johnny and Tommy Davidson.

KENWOOD.

Three putt greens on the fifteenth and seventeenth holes prevented Wiffy Cox from the 70 mark at Kenwood yesterday. He finished with a par round of 70, playing with Buddy Tew, W. O. Wooley and Joe Nanson.

CHEVY CHASE.

Lewis was out in 33, two under par, with birdies on the fifth and eighth holes, and returned in 35, one over perfect figures. He birdied 12 and 16 on the back 9 but 3-putted 10, 13 and 17. The round was played from the back tees and will be a mark to shoot at in the coming Invitation tournament.

John Brawner, Ralph Quinter, jr., and Dan Mason witnessed the round.

MANOR.

After playing and losing twice a week for the past five weeks, Harry Pitt and Max Taylor finally defeated Pro Al Treder and Ralph Gibson at Manor yesterday, despite Treder's 70, his lowest round in the series of matches.

Pitt and Taylor paired well enough to hand the Treder-Gibson duo a 2-and-1 trouncing, but still have nine matches to win to get even.

W. W. Smith played the Norbeck course in 75 strokes yesterday, his lowest golf round, in company of Dr. and Mrs. L. G. Pray.

EAST POTOMAC.

A dark-horse entrant, William H. Miller, looms as the new medalist in the East Potomac spring tournament after shooting a 35-36, 71 yesterday in his initial 18-hole round, and now needs only a 76 to lead Dutch Rittenhouse, present pace-setter, by a stroke. However, Andy Oliveri and Bob Morris, municipal aces, who will play before the qualifying limit ends, are both favored to beat Rittenhouse's score.

Mel Shorey set a new mark of 34 on the lengthened B course yesterday, with three birdies. Shorey will leave Wednesday night for the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. event at Old Point Comfort, and will play with Dave Morris, Edgar Merkle and W. Richardson.

COLUMBIA.

Navy's Crew Faces Lions At New York

Annapolis, April 17.—Victories in three major sports Saturday against opposition of the first class, produced a fine sports day for Navy teams.

Princeton crews are always tough and the Navy won handily in both the varsity and jayvee contests. In defeating Princeton in lacrosse, the Navy disposed of a team which was cochampion of collegiate teams with Maryland last year.

The victory of the nine against the University of Michigan, 4 to 0, in an errorless game, was a good win for Max Bishop, recently appointed coach for his charges.

The only mid-week contests will be baseball with Western Maryland and tennis with Duke, on Wednesday, and on Saturday, the Navy's big matches will be away from home.

The crew will meet Columbia at New York, the plebes joining the varsity and junior varsity in making the trip. It will be the opener for the plebes.

Tommy Thomson's field and track men, believed by him to form the strongest team the Navy has had, will open their season by meeting Columbia, the Eastern indoor champions, and Princeton, at Princeton. The lacrosse team should have little trouble with Yale in the game to be played at New Haven.

At home, baseball with Pennsylvania State will be the star event, while the tennis men meet Cornell and the golfers have a match with Princeton. There will also be a baseball game between the plebes and Eastern High School, of Washington.

Jacket Nine Loop Leader

Richmond, Va., April 17 (AP).—Randolph-Macon's well-balanced baseball team rounded the first half of the collegiate diamond season in the Old Dominion today with an impressive record of eight victories against one defeat.

William and Mary trailed close behind with five triumphs in seven contests. Virginia with four wins in seven starts and Lynchburg with three out of five were the only other State clubs that have broken better than even.

The "Big Six" standings showed Richmond's defending champions and Virginia's Cavaliers with victories in one game each and William and Mary also very much in the pennant chase with a 8-1 record.

Sixteen clashes are on the card for the week ahead, including three doubleheaders. Two games affecting the State title are listed for tomorrow with William and Mary at Washington and Lee and Virginia at Richmond. Virginia Tech will entertain Bloomsburg Teachers and Long Island U. meets Hampden-Sydney in a twin bill at Death Valley.

Verner Smythe's Sassy Too Wins the Windjammer Event

Sassy Too, piloted by Verner Smythe, national high-point Comet champion, led an Easter parade of 22 windjammers home yesterday off Hains Point, to hang up best time in the unofficial opening race of the Potomac River Sailing Association.

Although she failed to equal Sassy's time of 52:23 for the 3-mile course, Judge Prentice Edrington's Lady Avon came home a winner in the 20-foot open class, scoring over Ralph Young's Myray by a five-second margin, with the fast time of 53 minutes. H. Clinton Bush's Cricket II took third.

A minute behind Sassy in the light Sou'wester was Clyde Cruit's So Big in second place, with Henry Brylawski's Nimbus taking third honors in a close finish with Charles Dodge's Nandua. Sassy was never headed, as she opened her lead at the start, but failed to widen it appreciably until after rounding the Georgetown Channel spar, she pulled away running free.

George Danker's Sink Quick gave Wildcat and Bobcat an 18 and 22 minute trimming, respectively, in Class A handicap. Skipper Fred Tilp aboard Wildcat used his spinnaker to good advantage, leaving Bobcat more than 4 minutes astern.

Oliver's No Name was first in Class B, holding a 3-minute lead over Dick Shaw's Katishaw. John Maloney's Tralee was third.

Four new streamlined Moths from the Old Dominion Boat Club in Alexandria made a creditable showing. George Lindsay's Wee Too was too much for Bernard Berkow's Bo Peep by one-half minute, but the former held 5 and 6 minute leads, respectively, over Sidney Cohen's Sidco and Jack Babcock's Indigo-Under.

Giants, Indians Are Fined $200 In Game Row

Chicago, April 17 (AP).—Commissioner of Baseball K. M. Landis announced today the New York Giant and Cleveland Indian baseball teams each had been fined $200 following investigation of two disputes involving the two clubs in their recent exhibition game swing in Texas.

The statement by Landis said the Giants had been fined for their row in Houston April 3, when "members of the New York team, including the manager (Bill Terry), held up the game 12 or 15 minutes" in a dispute about an umpire's decision.

The Cleveland fine followed the Indians' forfeiture of their game to the Giants at Longview, Tex., April 6, when Manager Oscar Vitt ordered his team off the field after disputing a decision by Umpire Claude Tobin. Citing ground rules, Tobin ruled a hit by Joe Moore, which Outfielder Julius Solters ran into the crowd to catch, a double. Vitt contended it was an out, ground rules or no.

Landis ordered the fines paid on or before April 23. He had conferred with both Terry and Vitt in Cleveland last week.

Local P. G. A. Champion Tests Shots.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Old Point Comfort, Va., April 17. Leo Walper, Washington, defending champion, served notice today of his serious intention to retain his Middle Atlantic P. G. A. title by arriving for a week of practice over the Chamberlain Country Club layout, scene of the tourney.

Walper played an 18-hole practice round with Al Houghton, Chamberlain pro, and finished even par. The former driving range proprietor was hitting his shots well, although the strange greens cost him several extra punts.

According to Al Houghton $1,000 in total prize money being put up for the tourney is attracting a record field, which will tee off in the first round Saturday morning. More than 40 professionals from Virginia, District of Columbia and Maryland will compete.

Bobby Cruickshanks, the Richmond veteran, has already sent in his entry, this event being his only competitive try prior to the National Open at Denver this summer. A pro-amateur event will be held Friday, with pros pairing with Tidewater amateurs for cash prizes and a trophy. Entries have been received from Mel Shorey, Cliff Spencer, Wiffy Cox, Al Treder, of Washington; Ralph Beach, Frank Invernezzi, Johnny Bass, Charley Betschler and Louis Schrieber, of Baltimore.

Roy Briggs, Norfolk; Lee Colliflower, Hagerstown, Md.; Enie Ball, Charlottesville, Va.; George Diffenbaugh, Roanoke, and Eddie Koehler, Quantico, Va. Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, is still waiting word from P. G. A. officials as to whether he can play in the tournament.

Harper has not been a professional the required time for membership. He has applied, and there may be a special ruling so he can play.

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 17.—The World Champion New York Yankees, not looking so tough with Joe DiMaggio a holdout and Tony Lazzeri now with the Chicago Cubs, open their drive against the Boston Red Sox tomorrow, weather permitting, for a third straight American League pennant.

With fair weather, Fenway Park expects a crowd of close to 25,000—including Gov. Charles F. Hurley, who is to throw out the first ball, and Mayor Maurice F. Tobin. But, as is generally the case with openers in Boston, the forecast was for rain.

The Red Sox, picked generally to finish in fifth place this year, have a tough task in playing their first four games against the strongest team in baseball. After the opener, they will meet the Yankees in a double-header Tuesday (Patriots' Day), and a single game Wednesday.

Manager Joe Cronin surprised baseball observers late tonight by nominating 21-year-old Jim Bagby, rookie from Atlanta, Ga., to be his starting pitcher against the world champions. It will be the first major league start for young Bagby, a right-hander, who performed ably—but not spectacularly—during the Red Sox Grapefruit League season. Bagby came to the Red Sox this year from the Hazleton club, of the New York-Pennsylvania League.

Joe McCarthy, New York manager, decided on Charley Ruffing to oppose Bagby. Ruffing, who won 20 and lost 7 last year, was selected over Lefty Gomez, who won 21 and lost 11.

Steel Activity Holds Steady At 32 Per Cent

Upward Movement, Begun in March, Not Carried Into This Month.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 17.—Upward movement of steel buying in March seems to have spent itself and while the April rate promises to equal the previous month little evidence appears of a continued forward movement, says Steel.

Miscellaneous industries are expanding slowly, but their requirements are not sufficient to lend much support. Galvanized sheets are most active in flat-rolled products and tin plate is holding up well, production being close to 60 per cent. Sheets for stovemaking are being taken at a steady rate, but buying for refrigerators is declining. Agricultural implement makers are operating at 70 to 75 per cent with indications of about two months' activity before the seasonal lull.

Railroads are taking stock of the situation and considerable buying of rails is still to be done, even with tonnages held to the minimum.

While building as a whole is slow and aggregate tonnages are much below last year public work is bringing some important tonnages to fabricators. An award of sheet piling by the United States engineer at Los Angeles totals 2,257 tons, the Reclamation Bureau has placed 5,000 tons of shapes for Coulee Dam, 1,575 tons has been awarded for the Snake River bridge, 1,500 tons for a bridge at Fort Worth, Tex., and 2,500 tons for college buildings for the State of Pennsylvania.

Pending items include 2,000 tons for the United States building and 1,000 tons for the Belgian building at the New York World's Fair, 4,000 tons for a bridge over the Mississippi River at Rock Island, Ill., and 2,550 tons for a prison in Pennsylvania, part of which is reinforcing bars. Standard Oil Co. of Ohio projects a pipe line of 180 miles, which is estimated to require more than 10,000 tons of pipe.

Steelworks operation last week remained at 32 per cent, though indications are that this week may see some curtailment. Pittsburgh gained 1 point to 30 per cent and New England 10 points to 30 per cent, Chicago lost 1 point to 30 per cent, Youngstown 2 points to 31, Wheeling 2 points to 31, Cleveland 4 points to 23 and Cincinnati 27 points to 18 per cent. The latter has been staggering production alternate weeks from about 18 to 45 per cent. There was no change in the rate at Detroit at 18 per cent, St. Louis 42.4, Birmingham 66, Buffalo 28 and eastern Pennsylvania 28.

Construction to Begin Of Johns-Manville Plant

New York, April 17 (AP).—Johns-Manville Corporation announced today it has "decided to go ahead" with construction of a new $1,000,000 insulating board plant at Jarratt, Va., after deferring the project for some time because of uncertain business conditions.

The construction plans had been in abeyance since last year. Lewis H. Brown, president, explained funds for the project were obtained in 1937 through issuance of new common stock, but that "mounting uncertainties on the busines horizon delayed the decision to undertake a new project of this size."

General Motors Sales Set Overseas Record

New York, April 17.—Sales of General Motors' cars and trucks to dealers in the overseas markets during March totaled 37,003 units, the highest March volume on record, and were 15 per cent greater than sales in March of last year.

In the first three months of 1938, sales of 97,193 units were also at a record volume level and represented an increase of 12.2 per cent over sales in the first three months of 1937.

N. Y. Central Seeks $20,000,000 Loans

New York, April 17 (AP).—New York Central Railroad Co. is negotiating with several New York financial institutions for loans amounting to $20,000,000 to meet its financing requirements, it was reported in Wall street circles today.

For the six months ended June 30 the road, it was estimated in banking quarters, was obligated to pay out approximately $13,500,000 for miscellaneous maturing obligations and sinking funds.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended April 9 as approximately 5,680,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 5,821,000 tons; 1936, 7,392,000 tons.

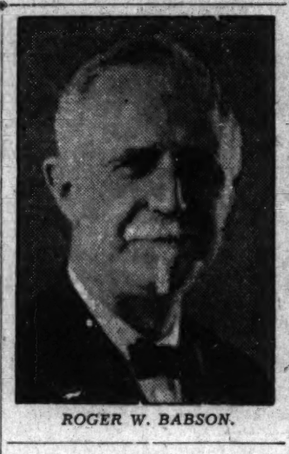
20 Billions in Pump-Priming Has Put Us Nowhere, Babson Says

Fault Is That Effort Is Being Made to Reorganize Human Nature, He Declares on Visit to Washington.

By Roger W. Babson.

Here I am at the Nation's Capital. This is what I find: Twenty billion dollars have been spent on pump-priming since 1933. Now, after five years, unemployment is almost as bad, business is not much better, and losses in some industries are greater. It should be obvious that something is wrong with the pump. The fault is that we have been trying to change human nature overnight. It is time we went to work and corrected this situation. The issue is far bigger than party politics. The future of America is at stake!



ROGER W. BABSON.

The easiest thing in the world, of course, is to sit back in the gallery and "kibitz." During the past few years there has been an endless barrage of destructive New Deal criticism by businessmen without constructive suggestions. "Let business alone" is a favorite slogan when times are good. "Do something for business" is the cry when things are slow.

One of the biggest faults of the New Deal has not been in writing "reform" legislation, but rather in going too far with such legislation. What we need today is to take a thorough inventory of recent laws, chop out the bad parts and keep the good. Throw away the acts aimed at changing human nature, and keep those designed to strengthen human beings.

Instinct and Legislation.

There has been too much loose thinking in connection with the "ill-housed, ill-clothed and ill-fed." These unfortunate people never will be properly taken care of until we get down to fundamentals. Human nature cannot be outlawed or outmoded by the waving of a wand. The world is still ruled by the instinct to own and to protect private property.

Moreover, the system of doing business for "profit and loss" is inbred. It has been developing through thousands of years. It can never be changed overnight. Hence, I feel strongly that the President should not now attempt another surgical operation, but follow the best physicians by letting nature make the cure. He should start now by preaching some basic economic truths.

Lest I be criticized as another "kibitzer," let me tell you what I would do right now "if I were President." I think the following moves would cure the basic troubles which are allowing people to starve in this great land of plenty:

Stop "Price Freezing."

(1) I would assure the Nation a free market for labor and commodities. All attempts to "freeze" the price of either market lead directly to more unemployment. This applies to labor unions, farm organizations, and business corporations. All forms of monopolies add to joblessness. Hence, price-fixing of all kinds should be stamped out as harmful to the Nation as a whole.

Politicians talk about "overproduction." It is true that an individual industry may get out of line by producing too many goods at one time. There, however, can be no overproduction in all industries. I would teach the people that only as more is produced, is there more to divide. The standard of living can be raised only through boosting total production; never by curtailing it.

(2) I would endeavor to have the securities and exchange acts and Federal tax legislation amended so as to encourage—rather than to discourage—new enterprises. Congress should differentiate between speculation in new risks and speculation in outstanding securities. More income may be needed by the Treasury after eliminating restrictive business taxes. If so, put a special tax on trust funds.

Money in trust funds is "dead" money. It is invested only in old industries. It never takes a risk. As trust funds grow, unemployment likewise grows. The sharp drop in stock prices, and the drying up of new capital issues, caused by unwise legislation, is responsible for much of our unemployment.

Self-Reliance Real Security.

(3) I would preach continuously the importance of self-dependence. Our various governments are engaged in all kinds of propaganda. Most of such efforts result in more joblessness. They are fitting men and women to seek positions in crowded occupations. Women have entered industry to stay; but if so, men must do housework and bring up children.

It is dangerous to interfere with the balance of nature. We cannot let people starve; but we can put a social and family blot upon the acceptance of relief. Civilization has depended upon such a stigma for centuries. Its sudden removal has been a primary cause of unemployment.

(4) I would kick "politics" out of the White House. Leaders of both great political parties agree that this would do much to aid employment. They, however, add that it would be suicidal for either the Democrats or the Republicans independently to risk cutting out "politics." This means that the sensible people of both parties should temporarily unite in this emergency.

Let us follow England's example by having a coalition government. Probably the most practical way of accomplishing this would be for the Republicans to nominate a sensible Democrat in 1940. There are today in our United States Senate many good possibilities for such a candidate.

Th New Deal has done many worthwhile things. In many ways it has made a better Nation. But its attempts to change human nature have resulted in unnecessary unemployment. Let us continue the good legislation, but amend the bad. This will restore the confidence of both labor and management. Then the pump will need no priming and real prosperity will return!

National production reported for the week ended April 9 by 8 per cent fewer mills was 3 per cent below the output of the preceding week; shipments were 16 per cent below shipments and new orders were 17 per cent below orders of the previous week, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important hardwood and softwood mills.

New York, April 17.—The national income produced in the United States declined in February to the lowest amount since December, 1934, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. This means that the income was back to the low level of the depression years, with the exception of 1932 and the first half of 1933.

The national income in February, declining for the fourth consecutive month, amounted to $4,120,000,000, as compared with the recovery peak of $6,426,000,000 last October, a decrease of 35.9 per cent. The February figure was 25.9 per cent lower than that for the same month last year, when the income amounted to $5,560,000,000. The national income in the first two months totaled $8,705,000,000 this year as against $11,241,000,000 last year, a decrease of 22.6 per cent.

Preliminary information indicates that the income in March was larger than in February as the result of a seasonal rise in the shipments of agricultural products and a moderate expansion of industrial activity. It is evident, however, that the increase in income was not great, especially since the price level in March was apprently slightly lower than in February. There is little indication that the income in April will show much improvement over March. As for May and June, it will not be surprising if some recession occurs.

Farmers' Repayments Exceed New Loans

New York, April 17 (AP).—Because farmers were paying on the principal of their loans more rapidly than new loans were being made, Federal Land Banks will not issue refunding bonds to replace the $22,000,000 of 4 per cent bonds called by the banks last Friday, Charles R. Dunn, fiscal agent of the Land Banks and Federal Intermediate Credit Banks, announced today.

An issue of bonds called last November 1 was also retired without refunding. Cash on hand and borrowings from Commercial Banks and the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation were used to retire the issue.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Postlude

By Rav C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge presents to the citizens of Washington an Easter concert by the National Symphony Chamber Orchestra, under the direction of Hans Kindler, in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce auditorium. Soloists: Feri Roth, violin; Merrill Jordan and Kenton Terry, flutes; Sylvia Myer, harp. Program: "Brandenburg" Concerto No. 4 in G major (Bach), "Concert Royal" (Couperin), "Triptyque" (Tansman), "Introduction et Allegro" for harp and orchestra (Ravel) "Tritico Botticelliano" (Respighi).

Following her gracious custom of recent years, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge tendered an Easter gift to local music lovers yesterday afternoon by presenting 38 members of the National Symphony Orchestra in a concert of compositions for chamber orchestra, under the direction of Hans Kindler, in the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce. A large audience appreciatively accepted her hospitality, and enjoyed a program as charming in performance as it was interesting in matter.

Rich as are the resources of the modern orchestra, its colors are too heavy for the music of the seventeenth century, despite the current vogue of transcriptions. The expansion of a work beyond its original dimensions not only magnifies its proportions and changes the perspective, but also transforms its content through exaggeration. It was, therefore, with a pronounced feeling of aesthetic satisfaction that one listened to Bach's fourth "Brandenburg" concerto in its primal state, undistorted by added sonorities, with the solo instruments taking their proper prominence.

Merrill Jordan and Kemton Terry were the players of the flutes which announced the theme of the allegro and carried the lovely melody of the andante, and Feri Roth lent his fine violin tone to the solo passages for that instrument. Of the six concertos which Bach wrote for the Markgraf of Bradenburg, the fourth is the most graceful in its movements and the most refined in its structure, approaching at times the lightness of a Mozart divertimento. The performance by Hans Kindler and his musicians preserved this delicate strength admirably.

The tonal balance of the epoch was sedulously observed in the transcription by Mabel Wood Hill of the first "Concert Royal," by Bach's contemporary, Couperin Le Grand, so that it sounded much as it did when played at the court of Louis XIV. Its somewhat pompous title covers merely a suite of dances in which a winsome prelude ceremonially precedes an allemande, a sarabande, a gavotte, a gigue and minuet. In this music is still reflected faintly the glamor of Le Roi Soleil.

A memorial purpose was also behind the performance of the "Tritico Botticelliano," by Ottorino Respighi, whose death two years ago was a loss we have not yet fully realized. A writer of poetic imagination and subtle artistry, he had the true creative vitality. In this descriptive suite he translated into tone his impressions of three of Botticelli's paintings: "Spring," "The Adoration of the Magi" and "The Birth of Venus." One's own reactions may not agree entirely with his, but one cannot deny the finesse with which the effects of pigment have been expressed in aural terms.

Bob Burns Says—

Us humans don't realize how weak and helpless we are 'til we get a flood or a storm. Man has never been able to invent a power strong enough to withstand the forces of nature when she goes on the rampage.

One of my uncles got a job in a lighthouse one time and he stayed out there one night and quit. He said "It's the most useless job I ever saw, the lighthouse had a whistle, a fog-horn, and a light in it, and when I saw a fog rollin' in, I pressed all the gadgets. The whistle pret' near busted my ear-drums, the fog-horn was loud enough to raise the dead, and the light was as bright as the sun, but the fog kept on comin' in, so I quit."

The son of the late Robert Roberts Hitt, Republican Representative from Illinois from 1882 to 1906 and Assistant Secretary of State in 1881, Mr. Hitt served in the diplomatic service from 1901 to 1914.

He began his career as a third secretary to the United States Embassy in Paris, later going to Berlin as second secretary and then to Rome as first secretary. Subsequently, Mr. Hitt returned to the Berlin embassy as first secretary. His last post was a three-year term as Minister to Guatemala; previously he served a year as Minister to Panama.

Born in Paris when his father was first secretary of the United States Legation there, Mr. Hitt was graduated from Yale University in 1898. In 1901 he married the daughter of Judge John Clinton Gray, of the New York Court of Appeals.

He was a member of the Chevy Chase Club, the Metropolitan Club, the Alibi Club and the Racquet Club of New York City.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Five-Suit Bridge.

Many readers have written asking my opinion of the new five-suit bridge and, further, requesting that I devote some of my articles to an explanation of the game. I am to comply.

Five-suit bridge offers many fascinating features, the most interesting of which undoubtedly is the exposed kitty which adds enormous plasticity to the hands of the team that buys the contract. The fifth suit itself is, of course, a novelty, but I fear that its contribution to the game, in the sense of additional card combinations and more complicated plays, is offset by the fact that it will place a heavier burden on the already overtaxed average memory.

It is somewhat too early to express an authoritative opinion on the future of five-suit bridge. Undoubtedly millions of players will try it, and of that number many may stick to it in preference to contract. I do not think, however, that there is the remotest chance that five-suit bridge will compete with contract on a basis of popularity. Nevertheless, I urge my readers to try the new game, because it is well worth while as a variation. Now for the mechanics of the game.

The Green Suit.

A brand-new suit, printed in green and marked by an eagle device, has been added to the standard deck of 52 cards, thus giving us a 65-card deck. This deck is dealt in the usual bridge manner and every player gets 16 cards. The last card (the sixty-fifth) is turned face up in the center of the table and is called the widow, or kitty. I shall refer to this kitty later.

Length of Suits.

The new ranking of suits is as follows: First, as always, notrump; next, the green suit, royals (or eagles); then, in order, spades, hearts, diamonds and clubs. Thus, a bid of one royal will overcall a bid of any other suit, but one notrump will still outrank a bid of any suit.

The Book.

Instead of the traditional six-trick "book" of auction and contract, declarer's "book" at five-suit bridge is eight tricks. Hence, a bid of one becomes a contract for nine tricks (one over "book"); a bid of five, a contract for 13 tricks. To make a game of five-suit bridge you must score 120 points instead of 100. The scoring value of tricks has been changed as follows: Notrump (per trick) 40 points; royals 30 points; spades 25 points; hearts 25 points; diamonds 20 points; clubs 20 points. Obviously this change of scoring values and the change to 120 points for game must have an enormous effect on the bidding. You still can go game with three notrump (120 points) but in the major suits, hearts and spades, you must now bid five-odd for game, and in the minor suits, six-odd. At royals you can go game with a bid of four.

Slams.

In five-suit bridge there are three types of slams. A small slam is a contract for six tricks over book (14 tricks in all). It will be noted that you can fulfill a small slam contract even though you lose two tricks. A grand slam is a bid for 15 tricks, and you can afford to lose one trick. A super-slam is a bid for all the tricks. The scoring values of slams are: Small slam not vulnerable 500; vulnerable 750. Grand slam not vulnerable 1,000; vulnerable 1,500. Super-slam not vulnerable 1,500; vulnerable 2,000. Penalties remain the same as in contract. Honor bonuses remain the same except that now a player may hold all five aces in one hand and for this he gets 300 points.

The Exposed Kitty.

As mentioned earlier, the kitty is in the fullest sense the crux of the new game. In the bidding each player visualizes the effect that the kitty would have if added to his own hand, a worthless card being discarded. When the bidding is over the declarer waits until the opening lead has been made and then has the privilege of picking up the kitty and putting it into either his own hand or into dummy, discarding any card from the same hand in order to retain 16 cards.

Scenes From Fuehrer Hitler's Bavarian Retreat

Comfort and beauty are stressed in the Bavarian mountain lodge above Berchtesgaden which Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler purchased and had renovated and enlarged. Master of all he surveys, Hitler enjoys this view from the second-story veranda, looking toward Salzburg.

Associated Press Photos.

Massive in size and simple in design, the dining hall is in harmony with the bigness of the rest of the establishment. The lodge originally was the home of Dietrich Eckhart, the poet.
